Dutch Spend $4,603,863 In America On Munitions

Planes and Bombs Compose Purchase

Arms Bought to Protect Huge Eastern Colonies, Observers Say.

By Sidney Olson.

The Netherlands has bought $4,603,863 of arms and munitions, chiefly aircraft, from the United States during the last 13 months, it was learned last night.

Speculation turned here yesterday on reasons for emergence of the Netherlands as this country's No. 1 munitions purchaser. The State Department preserved rigid silence on the matter.

The monthly arms and munitions report of the State Department yesterday disclosed January purchases of the Netherlands and Netherlands Indies in this country. The former bought $1,058,356 worth of airplanes and airplane parts last month, and the Indies $550,723.10 worth of bombs and bomb racks.

Anti-Red Pact Cited.

Observers at once coupled the continued heavy purchasing of munitions by the Dutch with the November 25, 1936, anti-communism pact signed by Germany and Japan, which secretly divided the Dutch East Indies into "spheres of influence."

Existence of a potentially serious situation in the Far East's southern regions was intimated further by a $625,000 order for bombing planes placed by the Government of Siam with the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co. in Baltimore on January 24.

The vast Indies group of islands, nearly all Dutch owned, is one of the remaining unexploited regions in the world, and is purportedly rich in industrial possibilities, particularly oil.

It is known Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German minister of economics, has prepared a scheme of Nazi penetration of the area, with particular encouragement to creation of German-owned companies under Netherlands laws, to develop exports to Germany of Javanese and Sumatran raw materials. The area is on the main line of communications between British bases in the Indian Ocean.

Whether the pressing Japanese and German need for oil is behind the accord on the Indies, no one yesterday was prepared to say. However, continued concern in London and Paris over minor aspects of the Berlin-Tokyo pact of last Thanksgiving made certain no phase of it would remain unexplored.

Airways Expanded.

The area which the Dutch must protect in the East Indies is wider than the United States from Portland Me., to Seattle. The Dutch, it is understood, have now expanded operations of the Imperial Dutch Airways, one of the world's greatest air lines, to cover hundreds of the related Indies islands with what amounts to almost local air-service and quick communication between settlements.

The Berlin-Tokyo pact gave Germany a free hand in "combating Bolshevik influence" in Europe and in the western half of the Dutch Indies. Japan was given the same free hand to fight "communism" in East Asia and the eastern half of the Indies.

Flying Instructor And Pupil Succeed In Cheating Death

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP).—A flying instructor and his novice pupil stared death in the face 3,000 feet above the earth—and lived to congratulate each other today.

DR. ROSWELL G. HAM.

DR. MARY EMMA WOOLLEY.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 4.—"A man in Mount Holyoke College—especially one of those Marines—never!"

Not if he aroused alumnae of Mount Holyoke—you know its just outside of Boston—nave anything to do about it.

The male problem at Mount Holyoke—the first time its become serious in a century—developed over a man named Ham—Roswell G. Ham, formerly of the United States Marines.

The alumnae, when they heard that Mr. Ham, a distinguished scholar, had been appointed to succeed Dr. Mary Emma Woolley, who will retire in June, were dumbfounded—to say the least.

Ever since Mount Holyoke was established a century ago a lady had taught ladies to be ladies and, in those days, the highest post toward which an intellectual lady could aspire was the presidency of Mount Holyoke.

It sort of proved, the ladies said in the dark days before they were allowed to vote, that ladies had common sense.

And now with the landslide vote for Roosevelt and a woman in the President's Cabinet what happens at Mount Holyoke where, they always said, they lived in the American way—look what's happened!

A man will come in in June, and Dr. Woolley (Mary Emma Woolley, in case you forgot) will go out, and if that isn't a challenge you can name your own odds.

The Holyoke alumnae were not long in taking up the challenge. A mysteriously published pamphlet appeared charging that the committee of alumnae which had selected Dr. Ham had been "packed."

Like a mother hen to the aid of her chicks came Dr. Woolley and, in a pamphlet circulated by the aroused alumnae, she was quoted as saying that she "could imagine no greater blow to the advancement of women than the an-

Maryland Data Disclose Many Wedded Young

Child Marriages.

Child marriages are not uncommon, Maryland has scores of brides in early teens, American Youth Commission survey showed.

The Tennessee Senate passed a bill to nullify future marriages involving persons under 14 as protests grew over wedding of 9-year-old girl.

This was shown yesterday in the results of a State-wide inquiry conducted in Maryland by the staff of the American Youth Commission, 744 Jackson place northwest.

Representatives of the commission found a half hundred or more brides who had married at an age when girls still are playing with dolls. In personal conferences with 6,642 women under the age of 24, the commission's representatives learned that 2,216 were married. Of these 2,177 told the age at which they were married.

One Married at 10.

Age	No.	Age	No.
11	1	19	360
12	2	20	305
13	12	21	169
14	36	22	121
15	125	23	65
16	205	24	22
17	350

Commenting on this table, Dr. Homer P. Rainey, director of the American Youth Commission, had this to say:

"Thus, more than one-half the girls who told their marriage age revealed that they were married

Capper Seeks Jail Situation Remedy Here

D. C. Committee Member Acts After Letter From Mrs. Roosevelt.

By James D. Secrest.

At the request of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Senator Capper, ranking Republican member of the Senate District Committee, yesterday visited the District Jail and came away with a determination to obtain better conditions both for prisoners and guards.

Mrs. Roosevelt wrote him a personal letter calling attention to the long hours and low pay of the jail employes. She said her interest in the matter was "unofficial" and that she was writing merely as "a temporary resident of the District."

Senator Capper, following his tour of inspection in company with Thomas M. Rives, superintendent, said he is convinced that Washington needs a new jail and the jail needs additional employes.

Matter to Committee.

He said he will bring the matter before the Senate's sub-committee on District appropriations when the District's 1938 budget reaches it.

"I'm in favor of economy in the operation of penal institutions," he said, "but I don't think the National Capital can be picayunish about such things.

"It's a bad state of affairs when 28 prisoners have to sleep on the floors as they did at the jail last night and when guards have to work seven days a week and eight hours a day."

Mrs. Roosevelt in her letter explained that she had recently visited the jail and found the working conditions appalling.

Wage Scale Low.

"It appears that the working hours at the jail are excessive," she wrote, "and that the wage scale is not as high as the wage scale for similar positions in the Federal service.

"In respect to the latter, the District government is suffering apparently from the fact that originally it was a very low paid service. District positions are less well paid than

Grandfather of Robert Taylor Denied Pension; Asks Star's Aid

By the Associated Press.

Holmesville, Nebr., Feb. 4.—Film Star Robert Taylor's grandfather, Jacob A. Brugh, who had been living on $16 a month state old-age pension plus $4 a month he gets for two rooms in his home, told today how his grandson aided him last fall, and expressed the belief Taylor will again come to his aid.

Grandfather Brugh, who bears the family name which was Taylor's before he discarded Arlington Brugh to enter the movies, said "Arlington is so like my son Spangler. (Dr. Spangler Brugh, father of Taylor.)

"If Little Spang were alive now he wouldn't let me be in want. I think if Arlington only knew how badly I need it, he would help me out," he said.

Then Grandfather Brugh told how Taylor, during his visit to his home State last fall, called at the Bruch home here.

"There was a great hubbub over at Filley (the town where Taylor was born you know). Then one day Arlington drove up here in a car and came running in to see me. 'Hi, grandpap,' he said to me. Just when he was leaving he handed me a $20 bill," Brugh said.

Taylor also arranged $15 credit at a grocery store, Brugh said.

$110,000 Left Smithsonian In Abbott Will

Wealthy Physician Made Valuable Scientific Discoveries.

It was more than 40 years ago that a lean, sinewy physician, a man of means, came to the Smithsonian Institution and asked if he could do scientific exploration for the institution at his own expense.

And from that time until 1923, when the man, Dr. William L. Abbott, of Philadelphia, was forced by failing health to retire from the rigors of exploration, he enriched the collections of the institution with all types of specimens from all parts of the world. Yesterday it became known that he had bequeathed one-fifth of his $550,000 estate to the institution.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Abbott gave his time and money toward collecting a treasury of mammals, birds, fishes, ethnological material, plants, wood carvings—virtually everything of interest and value to natural science. Yesterday Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the institution, said of him that he probably had done more for the Smithsonian than any one man.

Dr. Abbott's work for the institution did not die with him, although he died on April 2 of last year at the age of 76. The Orphans' Court at Philadelphia awarded the institution one-fifth of his estate. So his money will carry on his pursuit of rare plants and exotic animals.

As shy of publicity as he was bold in his search for some new creature, Dr. Abbott's name will be found in few, if any, biographical compilations. A hunt yesterday for a portrait of the man was unsuccessful.

"He went into places that were well nigh inaccessible," said Dr. Wetmore, one of the very few persons who knew Dr. Abbott intimately.

Everything he collected went into the National Museum. Of mammals alone Dr. Abbott contributed approximately 10,000. Four hundred and sixty-two of these, upon expert examination, turned out to be type speciments of new forms.

Dr. Abbott's active work ended in 1923 where it began, in the Dominican Republic. His swan song as a dig-and-hunt explorer was the rediscovery of living Plagiodontia, a genus of large rodents, no member of which had ever been seen alive by a naturalist since Ricord made the original discovery in 1826.

Financed Many Projects.

Retirement from the field did not stop his benefactions to the Smithsonian. In his later years he financed a number of projects which added further to the store of treasures attributable to his philanthropy.

Dr. Abbott was born in Philadelphia on February 23, 1860. He did his undergraduate work at the University of Pennsylvania, where he also studied medicine, and subsequently took advanced degrees in England.

Dr. Abbott bequeathed his Cecil County, Md., home to the State of Maryland for a park or forest preserve.

He never practiced the profession for which he had studied, except when his coolies or porters were ill, or were injured. His only survivor is a sister, Miss Gertrude Abbott, of Philadelphia.

He was not related to Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of Smithsonian Institution.

British Laborites Fight Big Pension For Former King

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 4.—Vigorous opposition to granting a pension to former King Edward was reported authoritatively tonight.

An informed source said Liberal and Labor leaders in Parliament have notified Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of their objection to the government proposal.

This unexpected difficulty in settling the last touchy problem involved in Edward's abdication was the chief subject of two cabinet meetings yesterday, during which the government unsuccessfully sough an alternative, it was said in this quarter.

The new problem came to light as a result of King George's delay in submitting a civil list, which fixes the incomes of the royal family's members throughout the reign of a monarch.

An annual allowance of £25,000 ($125,000) was believed sought for Edward, now the Duke of Windsor.

Langley Bombers Forced to Land on Flight to Panama

Spartanburg, S. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—The Ninety-sixth Bombardment Squadron of the United States Air Force which took off from Langley Field, Va., today on a 1,950-mile training flight to Panama ran into rough weather and was forced to land here.

The nine bombers, carrying four men each and an observation amphibian with six men, landed at the Memorial Airport here at 5:40 p. m., after taking off from Langley Field at 2:45.

The airmen will spend the night here and resume their projected round-trip flight tomorrow. Miami was to have been the first stop before the squadron started on the 1,140-mile over-water hop to the Canal Zone.

Levees Hold; Flood Danger Thought Past

120,000 Weary Workers Rejoice as River Stays in Banks.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 4.—The Mississippi River, absorbing devastating flood waters of the Ohio, carried its record load through the Delta country tonight under the vigilance of rivermen who predicted a safe passage to the Gulf of Mexico.

U. S. engineers, 120,000 workweary levee defenders and thousands of refugees driven from their homes by the flood shared the view that the worst was over, upon hearing of falls in the Ohio River and the upper Mississippi.

The yellow waters of the Ohio started falling at Cairo, Ill., heretofore prime danger spot, and the Mississippi slowly receded in a crucial stretch between Hickman, Ky., and Tiptonville, Tenn.

Defenders Keep Vigil.

Encouraging reports brought no relaxation, however, in the fight to maintain the thousand-mile levee line along the Mississippi.

The levee defenders, from Cairo to New Orleans, braving slush and cold, watched around the clock for possible breaks in the billion-dollar dike system.

At Portsmouth, Ohio, a 9-foot drop was registered and the Ohio was falling all the way to the mouth of the Wabash River above Shawneetown, Ill. The weather bureau at Cairo said a "very slow" fall is expected from Shawneetown to New Madrid, but stages will remain high for an indefinite period.

The gauge at Cairo, where the Ohio meets the Mississippi, showed a quarter-inch drop to 59.60 feet at 10 a. m., after hanging stationary overnight.

Slight New Madrid Drop.

Slight declines in gauge heights also were noted at Hickman and New Madrid, Mo. The Hickman gauge fell three-eighths of an inch this morning and overnight there was a one-eighth drop at New Madrid.

"As crest waters poured into the Mississippi River from the Ohio," Lieut. Col. Eugene Reybold, United States district engineer, said, "Ample freeboard is reported on all fronts."

"On the back protection levee of the Birds Point-New Madrid floodway the freeboard is about 3 feet," he said. "Below New Madrid on the long stretch all the way to Helena the minimum freeboard is about 4 feet."

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the National Red Cross, said 581,215 persons were being cared for in concentration centers of the flood zone. He estimated 987,000 persons were affected by the highest waters in history.

Disease Takes Toll.

Fire again struck Cincinnati, one of the heaviest hit by the Ohio. Flames destroyed several buildings early today, inflicting damage estimated at $300,000.

Additional deaths were recorded throughout the flood zone, due to influenza and pneumonia among refugees.

Dr. W. F. Draper, of the United States Public Health Service, said there were no epidemics and little of communicable diseases, but the situation would bear close watch for several weeks.

Louisville, like Cincinnati, a major object of the destructive Ohio, made steady progress toward rehabilitating itself.

Large forces of levee workers remained on duty at Mellwood and Ferguson in Arkansas. They occupied quarter boats tied up in the backwaters of the Mississippi.

The fertile triangle north of the White River's confluence with the Mississippi was deserted save for a few farmers determined to stay and stick it out. Most of the area is under water.

President Repudiates High as Spokesman

Article on Democrats Stirs Executive to Action.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Disturbed over the potential political effects of a magazine article which, in effect, read old-line conservative Democrats out of the Democratic Party, President Roosevelt yesterday repudiated the author of the article, Dr. Stanley High, as an authoritative spokesman for him, or as one of his close advisers.

The Presidential repudiation did not refer by name to the youthful Dr. High, who during the recent campaign organized and directed the Good Neighbor League as an adjunct of the Democratic National Committee for the purpose of winning for Mr. Roosevelt the votes of church people, prohibitionists and pacifists.

But the statement clearly pointed to Dr. High and no secret was made of the fact that he was the target of the Presidential displeasure. This fact became obvious when it was learned that Mr. Roosevelt acted on receipt of word from Capitol Hill that Senate Democratic Leader Joe Robinson was so angry over the High article that, as it was put in one quarter, he was "biting tacks."

After issuance of yesterday's White House statement it was recalled Dr. High's name was not among those of guests invited to the

Heir to D. C. Baking Fortune Was 43; Partner in W. B. Hibbs Firm.

Suffering from a heart ailment, Mr. Corby had left Washington Sunday in hope of recuperating. He was 43 years old. He had been ill since last November.

He was a partner of the well-known Washington brokerage firm of W. B. Hibbs & Co., whose founder, William B. Hibbs, preceded him in death January 21.

With Mr. Corby at his deathbed were his wife and his mother, Mrs. Hattie L. Corby. He died at 4 p. m.

In Many Civic Enterprises.

Mr. Corby's business, social and civic interest were extraordinarily extensive. He was president of Emergency Hospital, a member of the board of George Washington University and a director of the Riggs Bank. He was a member also of the Washington Board of Trade and the Washington Stock Exchange.

His father, Charles I. Corby, and his uncle, William S. Corby, both of whom are dead, founded the Corby Baking Co. here from which they made a considerable fortune.

The baking company was sold several years ago and became a part of the Continental Baking Co. combine.

Father Died in Miami.

By a strange twist of circumstances, Charles I. Corby of whom Mr. Corby was the only son, died in the month of February at Miami Beach, 11 years ago. He, as the son, died of heart trouble.

Mr. Corby was the richest man in Montgomery County. His estate, Timberlawn, on Edson lane, just off the Rockville pike, and the home of his mother are surrounded by wide estates with elaborate landscaping. The boxwood hedges are famous.

Workers Ready for Toil Today, They Say, After 98 Days of Idleness.

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 4.—Pacific Coast maritime workers called off the longest and most costly strike in their history today and notified shipowners they would be ready to work at 8 a. m. Friday.

It was more of an armistice than a peace, however, for the end of the dispute left unsettled a number of loose ends likely to cause trouble in the future.

The disputes still hanging fire were forgotten momentarily tonight in the rush of 35,000 maritime and dock workers and the operators of approximately 50 steamship companies to get back to work after 98 days of idleness that caused an estimated economic loss approaching $1,000,000,000.

Joint Committee Acts.

Two hundred thousand tons of cargo awaited removal from the holds of strikebound ships or from docksides. In the four major Pacific ports and in the smaller ports along the Western Coast 237 ships were standing by, waiting to restore the American flag to the Western seas again.

The joint strike policy committee representing seven maritime unions, banded together in the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, blew the breath of life into the moribund Pacific commerce this afternoon.

Meeting at noon, the committee first checked the vote of the strikers in the referndum on its proposal to call off the strike.

The vote was announced as 18,408 to end the strike, 2,604 against the proposal. It was an approximate 7-to-1 decision, although it was not complete.

Ignore Objections.

Then the committee took up the matters still hanging fire. Among these were the dissatisfaction of the Marine Firemen, Oilers, Water Tenders and Wipers Association with their agreement with deep sea operators; the unsettled strikes of tugboat workers in Los Angeles and San Francisco, and of shipyard workers in San Francisco and Seattle, and the efforts of Honolulu

Strike Peace Talk Spurred By Increased Flint Tension

Leaders Silent on Parley Called at Request of President.

Governor Appeals For Orderly Action

Strikers Occupy Plant as G. M. Attorney and Judge Confer.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit (Friday), Feb. 5.—Intense efforts for peaceful negotiation to settle automotive strikes crippling the gigantic General Motors Corporation proceeded in closely guarded court chambers here last night and the conferees did not recess until 12:50 a. m. today. They will reconvene at 10 a. m.

Speeding the attempts to find a basis for settlement parleys was the desire to ease tension in strike-bound Flint, Mich., where "stay-in" strikers for more than 24 hours have defied a court injunction ordering them to evacuate two Fisher Body Co. plants.

Corporation and strike leaders met with Gov. Frank Murphy for the fourth time in two days, hurrying back to the conference in mid-afternoon after a brief recess for lunch.

After three hours, the session recessed again, then reconvened at 10 p. m.

Governor Makes Appeal.

At Flint, Police Chief James V. Wills was enlisting hundreds of "police reserves" to remain on call to "maintain peace and order;" 3,500 National Guardsmen continued their patrol of an area which contains the striker-held Fisher Plant No. 2, and women members of the United Automobile Workers "emergency brigade" joined with men in a demonstration in front of Fisher Plant No. 1, outside the military lines.

Roy E. Brownell, Flint counsel for General Motors, conferred for more than an hour yesterday afternoon with Judge Paul V. Gadola, who issued the ouster injunction against the sit-downers, but after the meeting ended General Motors issued a statement, which said:

"The conference between General Motors attorneys and the judge, Paul V. Gadola, has broken up without the judge signing writs of attachment necessary to authorize the arrest of stay-in strikers.

"Judge Gadola said he probably would not act on the writ today."

Truce in Force.

A non-violence truce arranged last night between city authorities and union leaders remained in force. A union organizer said he was satisfied Chief Wills' activity did not violate the agreement.

"Flint wants no repetition of the Herrin, Ill., massacre," the chief said.

Before the fourth conference of Murphy with General Motors officials, John L. Lewis, strike director-general and chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, the Governor announced:

"We are bending every effort to work our way out peacefully."

Of the tense situation at Flint he said, "I have requested the military authorities to keep in continuous conference with the civil authorities and the labor leaders in Flint in order that they may work to-

Rev. G. B. Cooke, Last Survivor of Lee's Staff At Appomattox, Dies at 98 in Virginia Home

By Frederic B. Tuttle.

The Rev. Giles Buckner Cooke, sole survivor of the officers who served on the immediate staff of Gen. Robert E. Lee at the time the shattered Confederate Army surrendered at Appomattox, is dead.

Death came to Dr. Cooke, one of those incredibly old men whose lifetime spanned almost a century, linking the distant era of the War Between the States with the industrial, scientific present, at his home in Mathews Courthouse, Va. He would have been 99 years old next May 13.

At the time Gen. Lee and his followers in tattered gray laid down their arms on April 9, 1865, Dr. Cooke was a major, although he still was in his twenties—young in years and old in body.

Throughout the bloody days of Petersburg, when the army was decimated before the superior numbers of the Union troops, he had acted as assistant adjutant and inspector general, and this was the post he held on the day of surrender, when the Old South died and the Confederacy went down in history as the lost cause.

As a gaunt young officer, Maj. Cooke—he did not become ordained as an Episcopal clergyman until after the war—was in close contact with Gen. Lee.

In a diary he kept carefully throughout the bloody days he spoke often of his commander, and that diary he carefully preserved and kept in the study of his quiet house in Mathews Courthouse. Now and again he thumbed it over and read from it to those historians, students and others who came to him for information about the war.

MAJ. GILES B. COOKE.

Dr. Cooke knew "Stonewall" Jackson, too, even before he knew Gen. Lee.

The oldest living alumnus of Virginia Military Institute, he studied under Gen. Jackson when that martyr soldier of the South was merely Maj. Thomas Jackson, a professor at the school in the ante-bellum days, known to some of his students as "Old Jack," and "somewhat of an odd one."

Dr. Cooke quarrelled with his professor, and for several years they never spoke. It was not until he was a boy officer on the battlefield of the First Manassas, and Jackson a general, who had just "stood like a stone wall," and earned his historic nickname, that they again became friends.

The oldest Episcopal minister in Virginia, and a beloved figure to the people of Mathews Courthouse, opposite Cape Charles, which lies south of it, Dr. Cooke was born at Portsmouth, Va., May 13, 1838.

After completing his course at V. M. I., he went to Petersburg, Va., and obtained a position near there teaching so that he might study law.

When the first guns rumbled in Charleston Harbor, and Fort Sumter surrendered, he volunteered to serve the South, and listed among the guests, except Dr. High, although he worked in headquarters during the campaign. He was in Washington that night and attended the dinner given in honor of the Electoral College at the Mayflower.

High's Article On Democrats Stirs President

Repudiates Story; Denies He Has Adviser-Spokesmen.

Senator Robinson was one of the conservative Democrats named by Dr. High whose political philosophy was held to be obnoxious to the President. Vice President John N. Garner and Senators Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, were others mentioned in this category by Dr. High. The Vice President, who also was represented as engineering a movement to take the President into the conservative camp, was reported as highly amused over the High article.

Other Democratic leaders, however, did not share the Garner amusement. They feared the High article, coming as it did from one advertised as "being one of the President's close advisers, might drive a wedge into present Democratic harmony, or, at least, might provide the Republicans with a test for harassing and embarrassing the New Deal.

When all these things were brought to the President's attention, he is understood quickly to have sent word to Capitol Hill that the High article did not reflect his views and that it was not authoritative in any sense of the word. He followed this with his public repudiation of Dr. High.

Stephen T. Early, assistant secretary to the President, late yesterday afternoon summoned the White House correspondents to his office and, without comment, handed to each a typewritten statement as follows:

"The President announced the death of the 'official spokesman' in March, 1933. He now announces the passing of the so-called authoritative spokesmen—those who write as 'one of the President's close advisers.'"

Described as Adviser.

Early declined to explain the statement. The use of the plural word "spokesmen" was noted and it was indicated the statement was a repudiation of all who undertake to reflect the President's views under cover of being one of his close advisers. But the White House quotation of the phrase "one of the President's close advisers" made the repudiation apply unmistakably and particularly to Dr. High.

In the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, containing an article titled "Whose Party Is It?" by Dr. High, the editors of that publication in an editor's note preceding the article, describe Dr. High as having "the Washington reputation of being one of the President's close advisers" — the identical phraseology of the quoted portion of the White House statement.

The Saturday Evening Post editors in that explanatory note also pointed out the significance of the High article, asserting he, "in a manner of speaking, reads the Democrats out of the Democratic party." They also discussed the High article in their leading editorial, captioned "So Soon?" In this editorial they assert "whether or not his (Dr. High's) article in this week's issue had or will have White House sanction, he does speak for a group that had more to do than any other with the shaping of the New Deal in its first term."

In conclusion, the editorial emphasizes that "it is the president of the Good Neighbor League who poses the question: Whose Party Is It?" and then adds: "If President Roosevelt does not say 'hush!' the question may be answered and political history made."

The President's statement yesterday was in effect the word "hush," mentioned in the editorial. At all events, it makes clear that Mr. Roosevelt did not and does not sanction the High article.

Dr. High, in his magazine article, contended that prior to the 1932 election of President Roosevelt the backbone of the Democratic Party nationally was the conservtaive, State rights Southern Democrats, and that the Roosevelt policies have been distasteful to them. This group, he contended now believes that "they can begin at once the work of dismantling the New Deal and demobilizing the New Dealers." He said the present strategy is not to oppose the President, "but to take him into camp."

But the former Democratic committee attache predicted these alleged plans would not succeed, and that by 1940 Mr. Roosevelt will have made the Democratic Party "genuinely a real liberal party," even though "in the process the party suffers a temporary weakening."

Looks Into Future.

"He knows thta economic liberalism of the sort which is incorporated in the New Deal will not be safe for long if its future is to be left to the mercy of a Democratic Party with the pre-Roosevelt leadership and the pre-Roosevelt point of view," Dr. High added. "I am sure that he does not propose to leave it there."

Dr. High also has an article in the current Liberty, titled "How the AAA Will Be Revived," which is described in a subhead as "an authoritative forecast of Washington's new plan of attack on that gigantic and still critical problem —the case of the farmer." In that article Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace is highly praised.

After the election, Dr. High wrote an article for Liberty, titled "What Roosevelt Really Is Going to Do." That publication on that occasion described Dr. High's article as "an authoritative forecast written by one of President's Roosevelt's most trusted advisers."

In that article Dr. High asserted in effect that the President in his second term would undertake some discipline of the press to eliminate unfair journalism.

To Do Own Talking.

The President, in a press conference, stated that he had not seen that High article and added that he would do his own talking. From time to time the President has met inquiries about other articles purporting to give his views with similar replies.

But not before yesterday has he pointedly repudiated articles of that nature with a bluntly written statement. None could remember when any President had issued a statement comparable to that which came from Mr. Roosevelt yesterday. Former President Calvin Coolidge, on one occasion, issued a statement forbidding use of the term "White House spokesman," which for several years had served as the reputed source of statements originating with the President himself in press conferences. The Coolidge statement was issued after Frank R. Kent, in the American Mercury, revealed that the President was actually the "White House spokesman" to whom newspapers attributed statements.

New Faces in Congress

SENATOR EDWIN CARL JOHNSON.

By Liam Lenihan.

Two-fisted, prairie-bred Senator Edwin Carl Johnson is here from Colorado to do "a lot of listening, plenty of voting and damn little talking." And he wants the word passed on to the lounge lizards that he is not interested in the merry whirl and that he will "pass up all the $25 banquets."

Tall, big-boned and brawny, Johnson was born in Scandia, a Swedish colony in Kansas, to parents who had migrated from Chicago after the disastrous fire of 1871. Then when the Sunflower State "got civilized" they moved West and young Johnson was brought up in the rolling prairie country of Nebraska where there was "room for cattle" and a sod schoolhouse to attend.

"The Little Red Schoolhouse was a palace by comparison," Johnson said yesterday. "The mud walls of the schoolhouse were 2½ feet thick and comfortable, but they did not look exactly elegant on the outside."

Worships Schoolmaster.

And if the schoolmaster was only worthia paltry $30 a month "he made up in character what he missed out in culture." Even today Johnson admits that he still worships him.

School days passed and the young prairie product became a railroad section hand, then telegrapher and finally dispatcher. He worked nights and went to school during the day until he suffered a breakdown and contracted tuberculosis. He decided to pull up stakes then and pioneer on his own.

The "Go West, young man" call was still strong then. So Johnson headed for the wild, purple sage country immortalized by Zane Gray. And out in the foothills in the northwest corner of Colorado he staked his claim, settled down and recuperated.

He spent 11 years in the county of the coyotes . . . "the happiest years of my life." And it was there his only daughter, Janet Grace, now 17, was born.

Drifts Into Politics.

Somehow he drifted into politics. Nominated for the assembly he won out, spent eight years in the lower House, then was chosen lieutenant governor. Finally he was elected first citizen of the State.

Senator Johnson, who was elected last November by the largest vote ever given a candidate of any party, is interested in "making democracy efficient." This can be achieved, he holds, with a double-barreled program of "economy and competence." And he added that he was "impressed by the President's devotion to democracy and his post-election desire to make democracy efficient."

Modestly admitting that he is "just a rookie" and reiterating that he will do "a lot of listening and no talking," the broad-shouldered Senator owned up a weakness for gym workouts for "recreation." And for reading matter he brushes his mind up on "current events, political economy and the Constitution."

corresponding positions in the Federal service.

"For example, the beginning pay for guards at the jail is $1,230 a year and persons to fill vacancies in the positions have to be drawn from Federal civil service lists of prison guards whose beginning pay is $1,680 a year.

Guards Hard to Find.

"It is, therefore, difficult to secure people who have taken an examination for a position at a higher pay who are willing to work at the lower pay which the District offers."

As a partial solution to this problem, she said, specific District examinations have been suggested, but she added that this would require a special appropriation.

Continuing her discussion of working conditions at the jail, she said:

"In a number of instances the staff has long hours, doesn't get as much leave each week as they would be legally entitled to and cannot be given the amount of annual leave to which they are entitled because of the limitations of funds and the exigencies of the service."

She added that the matter "seems to get back to the problem of finances of the District of Columbia."

Senator Capper said he agrees with Rives that a new District jail should be located away from the congested sections of the District and possibly at Blue Plains. He pointed out that when the jail was built 61 years ago it was located in an uninhabited area; now it is on the fringe of a growing residential community.

New Orleans Ruled By God of Mockery As Revelry Begins

New Orleans, Feb. 4 (AP).—Gay New Orleans abandoned itself to Mardi Gras revelry tonight.

The glittering street parade of Momus, god of mockery, ushered in the period of celebration preceding the climax of Mardi Gras next Tuesday.

Momus' 15 gaily colored floats, glittering in the torchlight of hundreds of flambeaux in the hands of colored bearers, offered spectator-jammed streets a pageant of "Operas of Yesteryear."

$60,000 Proposed For Relief Study

By the Associated Press.

A movement for investigation of unemployment and relief yesterday made headway in Congress.

Senators Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, and Murray (Democrat), Montana, proposed a $50,000 appropriation to finance studies by a special commission on which to base a long-range attack on both problems.

The Senate education committee recommended a $10,000 appropriation for a Senate investigation along the same lines, requested by Hatch previously.

Hurley to Fight Measure Aimed At Child Labor

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Feb 4.—In one of two actions touching Bay State workers both young and old, Gov. Charles F. Hurley today told President Roosevelt he would fight the proposed Federal child labor amendment as an ill-restricted and 'staggering grant of power" to Congress.

The Massachusetts Governor, a Democrat, made this statement in an open leter to the Chief Executive only a few hours after the State department of labor and industries lashed out at what it called widespread "discrimination" by Massachusetts employers against men past the age of 45.

Culminating a two-year study, the State agency reported that 50 per cent of Massachusetts employers who hire ten or more persons were discriminating rather "intentionally or unintentionally" against older men and women. It immediately pressed a bill carrying fines for such discrimination, but this met prompt opposition.

Gov. Hurley assailed the child labor amendment as handing power to Congress "without those necessary restrictions which would prevent abuse."

He criticized it as perhaps opening the way to "autocracy" and to "compulsory military training, involuntary work on public projects, forced attendance in concentration camps, and restriction of religious education."

The State labor department's measure would impose a fine of from $50 to $200 on an employer who dismisses or refuses to hire a person "because he is 45 or over."

Morgan Silent On TVA Accord After Parley

Norris Asks Creation of National System of Power Projects.

Expiration of the Tennessee Valley Authority's contract for interchange of power with Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, private utility, was followed yesterday by a conference between President Roosevelt and Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the TVA. Dr. Morgan insisted the conference was concerned primarily with flood control, but when asked if power contracts were discussed he replied that "several" subjects had been given attention.

Later in the day, Senator George Norris, Nebraska independent and author of the Tennessee Valley act, called for creation of "enough TVAs to cover the entire country." He has already proposed extension of the TVA experiment to the Missouri and Mississippi valleys.

Dr. Morgan explained to reporters that the contract's expiration, which followed refusal by TVA of the utility's demand for exclusive sale rights for the power which it purchased from the Government agency, did not affect the Alabama contract by which TVA bought some of the distribution property of Commonwealth & Southern in that State. The contract also provides "certain interchanges" of service, Dr. Morgan said. He said some of the provisions of the expired contract were to run for "a year and a half" longer.

Meanwhile, the injunction issued recently at Knoxville against expansion of the TVA program, was modified somewhat yesterday. It was this injunction which brought an end to negotiations between the Government and the Commonwealth & Southern for pooling private and public power. Yesterday Federal Judge Gore, of Tennessee, altered his order so that TVA may sell and transmit power from Norris Dam to the Aluminum Co. of America at Alcoa, Tenn. The modification was made at request of the Aluminum company.

Senator Norris told the Associated Press that "what the country needs is enough TVA's to cover it. That would mean the maximum navigation development, the maximum flood control, the maximum reforestation, the maximum correction of soil erosion, and the maximum amount of power."

G-Men Arrest College Youth In Threat Case

Alabama Sophomore Admits Attempt at Extortion, Hoover Declares.

Arrest of a 19-year-old University of Alabama sophomore in Tuscaloosa, Ala., on charges of attempting to extort $7,000 from Mrs. H. D. Warner, wife of a wealthy Tuscaloosa paper manufacturer, was announced here yesterday at the Department of Justice.

The prisoner, Sidney L. Reynolds, admitted writing three letters threatening harm to Mrs. Warner, according to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The youth said he wrote the letters to get money "to aid his family," Hoover said.

The first letter was mailed last Thursday at Tuscaloosa and demanded $6,000. A second letter was mailed Saturday demanding $7,000, and Wednesday Mrs. Warner received a third letter specifying that the money was to be paid a messenger.

A messenger who said he had been hired by an unidentified white man to pick up a suitcase and meet him at a church, was picked up by the Federal agents Wednesday night. The extortionist, however, failed to keep the rendezvous.

Hoover refused to disclose what clews led Tuscaloosa police to the Reynolds youth.

Reynolds was held in $12,000 bail at preliminary hearing in Tuscaloosa, the Associated Press reported.

A pre-law student from Clanton, Ala., Reynolds waived examination before a United States commissioner and was formally charged with using the mails in an attempt to extort money from Mrs. Herbert D. Warner, wife of a Gulf States Paper Corporation vice president.

Sheriff Festus M. Shamblin said Reynolds had given a "complete confession of the attempt which involved the mailing of three letters."

Reynolds denied any knowledge of the plot.

Kidnap Suspect Ends Life.

By the Associated Press.

Auburn, Wash., Feb. 4.—John F. Johnson, 40, held since Friday for investigation in connection with the Charles Mattson kidnap-slaying, was found strangled to death in his city jail cell today.

Police Chief Ed Norris found the body lying on the cell floor, a belt attached to the cot and around the man's neck. Other prisoners, in a "bullpen" nearby, said they heard no struggling or outcries during the night.

Night Jailer Charles Ludwig said he talked to Johnson about 11 o'clock last night and the man appeared despondent, even after Ludwig said he might be released today.

Johnson was arrested in the "hobo jungles" here Friday after some of the 100 other transients complained to police the man acted queerly and they thought he might know something about the Tacoma kidnaping. He denied knowledge of the affair, but officers sent his fingerprints and handwriting samples to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Johnson had lived on the Tacoma tideflats since 1927. He had no known relatives.

Kenyon Denies Kidnaping.

Kansas City, Feb. 4 (AP).—Wizened Robert Kenyon enlarged tonight his story pinning the kidnap-killing of Dr. J. C. B. Davis on a mysterious "Nighthawk," labeled by J. Edgar Hoover "purely mythical and a creature of Kenyon's imagination."

Brought to an almost impregnable cell atop Kansas City's towering courthouse after he led officers to the elderly Willow Springs, Mo., physician's bullet-torn body yesterday morning, the hill country farm youth persisted in his assertions "Nighthawk" was the actual abductor and slayer.

"Kenyon is the ony man in the case," said Hoover, whose operatives assisted in the search for the physician.

In an interview here, Kenyon admitted writing a ransom note and mailing it and another to Dr. Davis' family, but he insisted he was acting under pressure of "Nighthawk," who used the knowledge Kenyon was driving a stolen car. The demanded ransom of $5,000 was not paid. Dr. Davis' kinsmen failed in efforts to meet the abductor's conditions.

Kenyon is under a State charge of murder. The Federal men, marking the case as solved, have announced cessation of activities.

N. C. Man Held as Kidnaper.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—William J. Anderson, Elizabeth City radio dealer, was held for Superior Court on a charge of kidnaping his brother-in-law's wife, Mrs. Louise Cohoon, also of Elizabeth City, after a hearing here today before Recorder James Phipps. His bond was fixed at $2,500, which he posted.

Mrs. Cohoon, blonde 25-year-old wife of Walter W. Cohoon, prosecuting attorney for Pasquotank County, swore that Anderson kidnaped her 11 days ago and held her captive in his automobile for three days and two nights before releasing her.

Throughout that period, she testified, Anderson threatened her life when she made outcries, and insisted that she go to Florida with him, obtain a divorce and marry him.

On cross-examination, Mrs. Cohoon said she had no desire to punish Anderson, but declared she thought it necessary to prosecute him to protect her name and to show that she had not gone with him of her own accord.

Montgomery Aids Anti-Disease Drive

Montgomery County health officials, aided by the committee on sanitation and public health of the Civic Federation, launched its campaign against venereal diseases with a public educational conference Wednesday night in the Woodside School.

Declaring that the public must be made to regard syphilis as "a disease and not a disgrace," Dr. Huntington Williams, Baltimore commissioner of health, urged an approach to the problem similar to that used in the campaign against tuberculosis. The disease is more common than measles, he asserted.

Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, spoke on the county's program against social diseases. Three clinics are now in operation, one at Rockville, another at Damascus, and the third at Silver Spring. He stressed the necessity of getting persons with the early stages of syphilis to attend the clinics for treatment.

Rhees E. Burket, chairman of the Civic Federation committee which sponsored the meeting, presided. A motion picture was shown at the close of the speaking program.

'Payless Pay Day' Faced By Chicago Teachers

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Thirteen thousand public school teachers stretched their credit tonight in anticipation of the first "payless pay day" since the lean days of 1934.

The Chicago board of education made out checks totaling $1,600,000 for a payroll due tomorrow, but ordered them held back until there was some cash in the bank. A $250,000 payroll for about 3,200 maintenance employes was passed February 1, and James B. McCahey, president of the board, said another two weeks' pay for both classifications might be held up before the 1937 financing was whipped into shape.

Court Indicates 'Nominal Sum' In Cannon Suit

Justice Bailey Considers Directed Verdict Plea, Small Damages.

A hint from the bench that a verdict for only nominal damages may be awarded Bishop James Cannon in his $500,000 libel suit against Representative George Tinkham, featured the closing hours of the trial in District Court yesterday. The case may end this morning.

Justice Jennings Bailey inquired of opposing attorneys on two different occasions whether there was any law which would allow him to tell the jury the churchman was entitled only to nominal damages. Neither trial lawyer knew. The judge then said he believed there was such a law, and would try to locate it.

The sudden indication of the judge's attitude came as a surprise in the midst of lengthy arguments by Attorney Roger Whiteford, for Tinkham, asking the judge for a directed verdict. Whiteford argued that Cannon had "invited" Tinkham to make the alleged libelous statements, and that what Tinkham had said was true and fully admitted by Cannon himself.

Grew Out of Campaign.

The lawsuit grew out of charges uttered on the steps of the Capitol by Tinkham in 1929, in which he accused the bishop of "shamelessly violating" the corrupt practices act. Tinkham at that time declared Cannon had failed to report cash received for use against Alfred E. Smith in the Smith-Hoover campaign of 1928.

Justice Bailey, after consulting his lawbooks, will pass on Whiteford's motion for a directed verdict when court opens this morning. If he overrules Whiteford, testimony will resume with Representative Tinkham taking the stand in his own defense.

The bearded Congressman, on for a short while yesterday, was asked if he had released to the press a letter to the Attorney General demanding prosecution of the bishop. Tinkham said he could not recall. Miss Grace C. Hamelin, Tinkham's secretary, said she had no recollection of the matter. Cannon's lawyer explained this subject was raised in order to show that Tinkham bore "malice" toward the bishop.

Robert McNeill, representing Cannon, who is absent sick, said he would plead against a directed verdict for nominal damages. He said after court that he will cite previous decisions in libel suits which might persuade the justice to let the trial go on and allow the jury to decide for itself the extent of the bishop's damages, if any.

A highlight of yesterday was the charge by Whiteford that "the bishop is more interested in damages than his reputation." Justice Bailey remarked from the bench, "Yes, that is what libel suits are for—money."

Stressed throughout Whiteford's plea was the point that anti-Smith donations in 1928 were "two-State" money, that the bishop had spent some $17,000 in States other than Virginia, thus making him subject to Federal law. The bishp admitted he had spent some of the large contributions to his anti-Smith war chest in North Carolina.

Much point of the word "shameless," as used by Tinkham, was made by McNeill. He differentiated between an unwitting violation of the corrupt practices act and a "shameless violation," shouting that the bishop had complied with the law to the best of his knowledge and had always acted "in the best of faith."

Woman Dice-Shooter Asks Club to Return Lost $9,000

Clevelander Says She Was Called 'Dirty Names' When She Asked for $1 for Food; Keno Better Game, She Finds.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 4.—Mrs. Margaret Hearn, who lost $9,000 discovering that shooting dice is a much tougher game than keno, stopped the dice today and asked Common Pleas Court to order the return of her money.

In bringing suit against four operators of the Harvard Club, a suburban establishment long in the gambling news, Mrs. Hearn said that after losing $9,055 at the dice table she was called "dirty names" after she asked for "$1 to eat on."

Mrs. Hearn, widow of a policeman, said she became interested in keno in 1935 after she sold her restaurant and had some ready cash.

She said she went to the club with some keno-playing women friends one evening and the men at the club "began telling me I could double my money at shooting dice."

"It seemed," Mrs. Hearn continued," that I lost every time. Then I got to thinking I could get my money back if I played more, and I played and played. I was always there in the evening. Sometimes I played in the afternoon, too."

In that frame of mind Mrs. Hearn went along until—"in the early morning of November 14 I was broke."

"I asked the doorman for a dollar," said Mrs. Hearn, 47 years old and the mother of a 20-year-old boy.

"Over our heads, the fellow up in the little box with a machine gun tossed a dollar down to me. But another man grabbed it. After an argument in which I was called dirty names they let me keep the dollar."

In her suit, Mrs. Hearn asked for return of the $9,055 she lost and $1,000 exemplary damages.

Greek Believed Involved in Bizarre $2,000,000 N. Y. Thefts.

The surrender in New York of Gus Poulis to Federal agents to answer charges of having participated in the disposal of a part of $2,000,000 worth of Treasury notes and other securities stolen from New York banks in what police described as "phantom-like" robberies was announced by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigatoin, last night.

The securities were stolen under mysterious circumstances more than two years ago from the United States Trust Co. and the Bank of Manhattan.

In announcing the surrender, Hoover said Poulis was considered "one of the ringleaders" of the "Greek combination," which disposed of some of the securities through brokerage accounts at Boston, New York and Washington.

Poulis was being held in New York as the twenty-first suspect in the two closely paralleling cases, which were kept as much as possible from the public. The robberies themselves were more bizarre than some of the most extravagant detective fiction.

A wallet containing $1,456,000 in Government bonds disappeared from a Wall Street skyscraper on January 28, 1935, shortly after a messenger for the Bank of Manhattan had placed it on a counter ledge.

Subsequent investigation of the messenger absolved him of suspicion.

Only a month before police had been baffled by the strange disappearance of $590,000 in United States Treasury notes from a cage of the United States Trust Co.

When he admitted being implicated in the case, Charles J. Hartman was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment last September.

In October four men were tried and acquitted on charges of illegally transporting $800,000 of the Bank of Manhattan's securities across State lines.

Hoover asserted here last night that a complaint was filed here yesterday charging Poulis with violating the national stolen property act and with having sold altered Government securities.

Hoover said the securities disposed of through various brokerage accounts all had been altered and bore spurious serial numbers, the true identity of which was established by careful study and examination in the F. B. I.'s scientific laboratory.

Files of the Identification Bureau of the F. B. I. reveal that Poulis was arrested in Newark, N. J., by police on March 19, 1931, for carrying concealed weapons. He was arrested again that autumn on a vagrancy charge. Both charges were dismissed.

Air Line Chiefs Seeking Radio To End Crashes

Government Officials Meet With 200 Operators of Commercial Lines.

Determined to remove every possible hazard from air travel, more than 200 aviation officials meeting here with Government officials yesterday opened fire on inefficient and obsolete radio equipment still in use.

"We all know that faults in existing radio equipment have contributed to several airline accidents," Eugene Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, declared as the three-day national aviation safety conference got under way at the Department of Commerce.

After it was revealed that some airlines have not installed the latest type radio equipment on which the lives of their passengers might depend in an emergency, Vidal warned that all domestic airlines soon will be compelled to equip their transport planes with new radio equipment designed to overcome snow and rain static.

Tells of Improvements.

Marlan Hull, chief pilot of Transcontinental & Western Air, told how a new type shielded loop radio antenna, used on his company's lines eliminates static caused by the bombardment of electrically charged snowflakes and raindrops.

"You probably have guessed that we are on the verge of requiring a loop antenna as good or better than this and possibly a homing antenna on every airline plane," Vidal interjected.

"We know that rain and snow static has contributed to several of the recent airline accidents and we regard the problem as very serious."

Snow static, it was explained, often cuts off pilots lost in a snowstorm from radio communication with the ground.

Will Discuss Crashes.

Tomorrow the aviation officials plan to frankly and publicly discuss the causes of recent crashes of transport planes.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. M. Johnson in opening the conference reminded the delegates that the meeting was not called "with the intention of placing the blame for these accidents on the shoulders of anyone present."

Controversy developed over the value of direction finding equipment in transport planes which through contact with ground stations would give a pilot his exact location at any time.

Vidal expressed the belief the direction finders should be installed in all transport planes. C. T. Solt, chief of radio engineers for the United States Coast Guard, said the direction finders had proven of great value in Coast Guard planes.

Praises Equipment.

George Gardner, of Eastern Air Lines, said present direction finding equipment operated perfectly 98 per cent of the time. Dan C. McRae, also of Eastern Air Lines, suggested using ground direction finders to supplement regular beams. Other experts contended the ground direction finder equipment would be too heavy for transport planes.

The aviation officials complained bitterly over the congestion in the 200-400 kilocycle range bands in which they are compelled to broadcast and receive all instructions.

E. K. Jett, assistant chief of Federal Communications Commission, said it is realized that interference on the present 278-wave band could have proven disastrous in many instances. He asked the industry to advise the commission what frequencies and how many it believes essential to safety.

Urges Rigid Checks.

Maj. R. W. Schroeder, of the Bufeau of Air Commerce, emphasized the importance of a more rigid check on the efficiency of pilots and equipment.

Reeder Nichols, Air Commerce Bureau radio inspector, said there was not a high degree of uniformity in airline radio equipment. Competition between manufacturers, he said, has resulted in production of inefficient equipment which might find its way into a transport plane. He urged establishment of a corps of inspectors to constantly check on radio equipment.

D. W. "Tommy" Tomlinson, TWA experimental pilot, told the conference that the "nose-wheel" landing gear developed by the Wright Brothers Co., and now being tested by the Army, contributes more to safe landings while flying blind than any recent development.

Vidal told the conference his bureau is appealing for more funds to revise and modernize its existing equipment.

Vidal explained that the bureau has drawn up a list with 300 items of proposed improvements on it. When Vidal called for comment on the bureau's program no one spoke. Vidal called it an "interesting silence."

They Are Seeking to Make Air Travel Safer

Underwood & Underwood.

Airline officials met yesterday with officials of the Bureau of Air Commerce to study air safety. Left to right, C. A. Patterson, president of United Airlines; E. E. Jett, chief engineer of the Federal Communications Commission; Sidney Shannon, operations manager of Eastern Airlines; Eugene Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and Harlan Hull, chief pilot of TWA.

longshoremen, Pacific ship scalers and dock clerks and checkers to obtain satisfactory agreements.

Sweeping these aside momentarily, the committee voted to end the strike and so notified the ship owners officially.

The notification was based on the agreement among the unions to let a majority vote decide the strikers' course.

Other questions still to be settled were the sailors' dissatisfaction with the continuous discharge record books required under the Copeland safety-at-sea act and the sailors' demand for jurisdiction over East Coast vessels, especially the large Luckenbach line. The first is a Federal matter; the second an interunion question. The sailors, firemen and cooks of Western vessels are on record as refusing to accept the discharge books which the law says every worker on an American ship must have by February 20.

Plan Plea to Congress.

Efforts are being made to delay enforcement of the law until the maritime groups can appeal to Congress for modification. They fear the books will be used for blacklisting.

The men are going back to work, starting tomorrow, when the first ships are scheduled to clear Western ports, under agreements which generally provide higher wage scales, cash for overtime, and union recognition.

The agreements represent compromises in three months of steady negotiations. Neither side claimed a victory.

Many Problems Involved.

By the Associated Press.

Problems left unsolved by the memorable 1934 waterfront strike brought on the West Coast shipping tieup which began October 30, 1936, and ran until it set records for a walkout of its kind and wrote a new chapter in labor relations history.

The unions asked wage increases, union recognition, control of hiring, the rotation of men on standardized jobs to equalize work distribution, the 8-hour day, with 6 hours for longshoremen, cash pay for overtime work by seagoing men instead of the "time off" practice prevailing, and preference for union members in all employment.

16 Injured in Clash.

Reading, Pa., Feb. 4 (AP).—Sixteen men were injured today outside the Caloric Gas Stove Works at Topton, where union workers went on strike a month ago. Sheriff's deputies, who accompanied a group of employes to the plant, said they were attacked by more than 200 men with clubs and bricks. The Committee for Industrial Organization attempted to organize the 500 employes last fall.

Williamsburg Movies To Be Shown Tonight

Williamsburg, Virginia's Colonial capital, which has been restored to its eighteenth century appearance, will be the subject of an illustrated lecture before members of the National Geographic Society tonight at Constitution Hall by Sydney Shurcliff, one of the landscape architects.

Shurcliff's still and motion pictures will show the progress of the work and the present appearance of the town.

gether to preserve peace. I expect both sides to help, and if called in together, as they were last night, to give help to achieve the objective."

Brownell, General Motors counsel at Flint, said Sheriff Thomas Wolcott "told us he had a limited force, but would ask Gov. Murphy to provide the aid of the National Guard in serving the writs." He added that "I believe the union officials will ask the men to go out peaceably."

Staying close to the Governor's conference, held in chambers of his brother, Recorder's Judge George Murphy, today were the entire union's "board of strategy," empowered to determine the union's course of action.

Actively participating in the discussions with the Governor were William S. Knudsen, executive vice president; John Thomas Smith, general counsel, and Donaldson Brown, finance officer, for General Motors, and Lewis, Martin and Lee Pressman, C. I. O. counsel, for the strikers.

When the fourth session of the conferences started, the discussions had been carried on for 12 hours. Gov. Murphy at Lansing on January 15 brought the same conferees, Lewis and Pressman excepted, together in a 17-hour conference from which came a truce agreement which failed to result in settlement negotiations because each side charged the other with violating it.

Rubber Strike Parley.

District Labor Is Split on Plea For Strike Aid

Green Is 'Surprised' Rival Group Asks Donations From Federation.

An appeal for funds to aid the United Automobile Workers in their strike at General Motors Corporation plants yesterday brought a varying response in labor circles in the capital.

Another strike development was a House vote upholding Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins by tabling a resolution calling on her to divulge all information she has about the motor company dispute.

The union plea for funds was addressed to all union labor, despite the fact that the union, along with others in the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization was suspended by the American Federation of Labor for "insurrection."

"This fight for the right to organize is your fight as well as ours," the appeal read. "Briefly stated, in this strike we are fighting the whole Wall street oligarchy. We are fighting that band of financial free-booters who all along the line have placed every conceivable obstruction in the way of human betterments. * * * Our men and women are determined to carry on this struggle for human freedom until the flag of surrender is hoisted by General Motors."

"It is rather surprising that the United Automobile Workers now come to an organization which it deserted with a plea for financial aid." He told the United Press he did not intend to ask international unions of the Federation to contribute.

At the same time Arthur Wharton, president of the machinists' union and a foe of Lewis' C. I. O., told the Associated Press there was "nothing unusual" about the appeal. He said organizations outside the federation frequently asked federation unions for help in time of strikes.

The House action supporting Miss Perkins followed a statement by Chairman Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the Labor Committee that the resolution was "one-sided" and called for confidential information from only the workers' side. He said that not a member of the committee "indorses the sit-down strike."

Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, who sponsored the resolution tabled by the House, replied to Connery that information on the employers, in the controversy, was being brought out by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

Goebbels Hits League In Plea for Colonies

Hamburg, Feb. 4 (AP).—Another appeal for the return to Germany of the colonies she lost in the World War was made here tonight by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Chancellor Hitler's minister for national enlightenment and propaganda, before an audience of 30,000.

Last Survivor Of Lee's Staff Is Dead at 98

Rev. Giles B. Cooke Was Major at 27; Oldest V. M. I. Graduate.

joined the staff of Gen. Philip St. George Cocke as a first lieutenant. He rose rapidly and served on the staffs of Gens. P. G. T. Beauregard and Braxton Bragg and Sam Jones.

Dr. Cooke was in the thick of many battles and major campaigns. At Sayler's Creek, while he was serving with Lee, he was struck by a minnie ball and wounded severely. He fought through the first Battle of Manassas, although ill with fever.

Up and down the South he went with the various commands—a war-ridden, war-torn South, in which pillared mansions had been burned and beautiful cities bombarded and peach orchards, forest and pastures turned into battlefields.

In Seige of Charleston.

He served at Shiloh under Gen. Bragg, and then he participated in the seige of Charleston, within range of the Union guns on the islands, with Gen. Beauregard.

Charleston crumbled under the pounding of the "Swamp Angel" and other famed Federal cannon, but Beauregard held on.

He fought at the Battle of the Crater in 1864, and at Five Forks in 1865. At Sayler's Creek he lost both horse and equipment and suffered his wound while getting across a pontoon bridge.

Vowed to Become Minister.

While Dr. Cooke was in Alexandria, Va., on Gen. Cocke's staff, he vowed that if he were spared until the end of the war, he would become a minister of the Gospel.

Later he was baptized on the field of battle by Dr. Philip Slaughter, the Confederate chaplain, impervious to the shot and shell that whined from woods and ridges around him.

When the war had ended, he conducted a preparatory school for boys at Petersburg and studied for the ministry. He was ordained a priest of the Episcopal Church at St. Paul's Church, Richmond, in 1874. He worked in the Petersburg diocese before and after ordination, chiefly in charge of Negro work, until 1885.

He then served as rector of St. Stephen's Church, Petersburg, and held several other parishes, including the rectorship of Kingston Parish, in Mathews County, from 1904 until 1915.

Retired in 1917.

In 1917 he retired from the active ministry while at the All Saints Church, Portsmouth. For a number of years before that he had been rector at St. Mary's Church, Northeast, Md.

Returning with his family to Mathews Courthouse, in eastern Virginia, a quiet city much the same as it had been in the days before the war, he led a studious and gentle life.

He served as assistant chaplain general on the staff of the commander in chief of the Confederate Veterans and as chaplain of various camps.

But in retirement it was Dr. Cooke's study that became his sanctuary, his bridge across the years to the sad but brave and romantic days of swords and drums and thudding hoofs.

The study or library in his ancient, ante-bellum home contained the tarnished relics of the war.

Admired Lee's Coolness.

Thumbing his diary, he talked to those who came.

Most of all, he told them, he admired Lee's coolness and disregard of personal danger under fire.

"Feeling that all would be lost in event the enemy were not checked, he exposed himself to the most terrific fire from the enemy's batteries," he recalled, with the aid of the diary.

"Repeatedly I saw the round and solid shot throw up the dirt all around him.

"It just was not intended that we should be successful—that glorious army of ours."

Always when he reviewed and talked of the last sad retreat of Lee's army from Petersburg to the finish at Appomattox, Dr. Cooke grew wistful.

The day before the surrender, Saturday, April 8, 1865, he wrote that the Union Army had reached the Confederates that day with over two corps of infantry and Sheridan's cavalry.

Enemy Grew Stronger.

"The enemy's force grew stronger and stronger," he remembered, reading from the yellowed, stained pages.

"By night they reached us—40,000 infantry, besides artillery and cavalry."

He recalled how Lee lost 23,000 men between Petersburg and Appomatox. There were only 9,000 infantry to lay down their arms that Sunday, April 9. Two thousand cavalry and artillery had broken through the enemy lines the night before and escaped.

"After the surrender, Gen. Lee came back to our camp," recalled Dr. Cooke.

"He gave his farewell address to the Army. After concluding, the tears ran down the old hero's cheeks and he gave way for the first time I ever saw him do so since my connection with him. Generals and officers of all grades and privates wept like children.

"That evening it commenced to rain."

'A Citizen Slave.'

The next day, Dr. Cooke always recalled, in a depressing rain, he and Lee set out for Belmead together on horseback—two weary soldiers of a lost cause going over the muddy roads.

His diary ended April 11, 1865, with this notation:

"I am now a citizen slave and what will become of me and the people of our Southland, God only knows."

Surviving Dr. Cooke, who was so devout he would neither read nor write on Sundays, are his wife, Mrs. Catherine G. Cooke; a daughter, Miss Catherine Cooke, and two sons, Giles B. Cooke, jr., of Newport News, Va., and John Warren Cooke, of Mathews Courthouse.

Funeral services will be held at historic Ware Church, Gloucester, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Officiating will be the Right Rev. Arthur C. Thompson, bishop of southern Virginia, assisted by the Rev. George C. Shaw, rector of the Kingston Parish; the Rev. H. S. Osborne, rector of Ware Church, and the Rev. W. T. Holmead, rector of Trinity Church, Portsmouth.

Burial will be in the church cemetery, and here and there among the sorrowing throngs will be, perhaps, a bent, white-haired oldster of almost unbelievable years, who followed Lee on Traveller three-quarters of a century ago, in the ranks.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT TAYLOR, of Pittsburgh, Pa. Not the film star people think he is, Robert Taylor is thinking of changing his name to Spangler Arlington Booth, real name of the screen's No. 1 lover, in order to ward off all the pestering he has endured for the past year. Equally tired of the fuss is his wife, with whom he is shown above.

JACOB A. BRUGH, 82-year-old grandfather of Robert Taylor, film star, shown at his home in Holmesville, Nebr., where he is on relief—hoping his grandson will aid him. Brugh, who says he is confident Taylor will give him aid, lives on a pension of $16 a month allotted him by the State.

said she had contributed to Grandfather Brugh's support since the death of Dr. Brugh and would continue to do so. Taylor added "mother and I have always been glad to help grandfather in every way possible."

County Assistance Director Saunders at Beatrice, Nebr., near Holmesville, said Taylor talked to him last night about Brugh's case. County records show Brugh was granted an old-age pension April 27, but his name was removed from the rolls August 1, the county board holding Taylor was legally responsible for his grandfather's support.

Taylor Seeks Relief.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Things have come to such a pass, what with autograph seekers, movie fan letters and lovelorn ladies who want to meet him, that Robert Taylor—the real Robert Taylor, of Pittsburgh—is thinking of changing his name, he said today.

The one he is considering (not in real seriousness, of course, for his own goes back through five generations to Rotherham, England) is "Spangler Arlington Brugh."

In case you don't know, that's the real name of the movie Robert Taylor.

The real Robert Taylor (of Pittsburgh) is here with his bride. He has been pestered, he said today, for a year.

Woman Testing Townsend Plan Forfeits Pension

Chelan, Wash., Feb. 4 (AP).—A Townsend test "pension" cost Mrs. Retta Freeman her State old-age benefits today.

Mrs. Freeman, indigent former storekeeper and orchard owner, was given $200 to spend in a test of the old-age pension plan.

Today State pension officials notified her she would not receive the usual $17.50 monthly payment for six months, beginning March 1. Under State law aged indigents with other income are not entitled to a pension.

Bewildered, Mrs. Freeman cried: "I don't know how I can get by unless I can stock up on food with what is left of the test 'pension.'"

Mrs. Freeman, who started spending Monday, has $150.50 left.

Merchants today criticised the plan. One said:

"I'll bet $25 this test fad blows over in less than six months. And it's too bad to disillusion these old folk."

Hosiery Workers To Organize South

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Hosiery Workers decided yesterday to concentrate all available resources for an organization campaign in the South.

Convention headquarters said an organizers' meeting laid plans for intensification of the Southern drive and for prosecution of the strike at the Berkshire Knitting Mills, near Reading, Pa., now in its fifth month.

In the sessions which started January 24, the convention rewrote the Federation's constitution, voted to make a $50,000 contribution to the Committee for Industrial Organization, decided on a policy of "area" agreements, elected a national executive board and created a department for workers' education.

Taximen Liable To Fine of $250 By Using Radio

Taxi taxing would achieve a new high if present copyright laws were enforced, Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin, said yesterday.

Senator Duffy went into the White House to talk to the President about silage and relief of Wisconsin dairy farmers, but he came out talking to reporters about the plight of Washington taxi drivers.

The hackers, according to Senator Duffy's version of the copyright law and the operations of the A. S. C. A. P., the American Society of Composers, Artists and Publishers, engaged in enforcing it, are liable to a $250 assessment for playing radios in their cabs, because they could be construed as attracting business.

Duffy has reintroduced his bill of the last Congress, bitterly opposed by A. S. C. A. P. He recalled one instance where, he said, a woman operating a small boarding house was penalized $250 because some of her paying guests danced to radio music which included copyright compositions.

Wallace Approves RA Dance for Flood Fund

Secretary Wallace yesterday gave his approval to a dance to be held by the Resettlement Administration of the Department of Agriculture with the proceeds going to the Red Cross for flood relief.

The benefit will be at the Raleigh Hotel Tuesday, Elbert B. Specter, in charge of arrangements, announced. The Raleigh is donating the ballroom, and a Meyer Davis orchestra unit is contributing its services, permitting total receipts to go for relief.

Trotzky Attacks Soviet Envoy's Stand on Plot

Denies Urging Assassination of Stalin as Charged by Troyanovsky.

By the United Press.

Mexico City, Feb. 4.—Leon Trotzky tonight vigorously attacked Russian Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky in Washington for "having insinuated" that Trotzky advocated assassinatoin of Dictator Josef Stalin.

The exiled former Russian leader said he had read "with the greatest stupefaction" dispatches from Washington regarding the Ambassador's statement yesterday that Trotzky, by his own admission, confirmed the death plot against Stalin by opposition Communists. The Ambassador quoted a statement attributed to Trotzky, which was published on January 28 to the effect that "it is impossible to displace him (Stalin) except by assassination."

"Troyanovsky must have lost his equilibrium entirely—I speak not of Diplomatist Troyanovsky but of Journalist Troyanovsky—to resort to such a futile argument," Trotzky said.

"It would, however, be a complete lack of respect for the American press to propose that it print statements containing direct appeals to assassination. In reality, in my statement, as is evident to every impartial reader, I explained the political psychology of the ruling group in Russia. I wrote that Stalin believes himself irreplaceable as leader, as uncontrollable as Hitler. Stalin believes there are not legal means whereby he can be replaced; that it is impossible . . . either to alter the policies or the composition of the leadership. That is why he believes the opposition, if it wishes to attain its ends, must have recourse to terrorism.

"That is why every opposition is—for the masters of the GPU—composed of potential terrorists. All political criticism is merely the first step toward assassination of Stalin and his collaborators. Following which, Andrey Vishinsky (prosecutor in the recent trial of Karl Radek and 16 other Communists) enters into his domain of jurisprudence, identifying the first step with the last. The opportunists are automatically classed with terrorists. I spoke, consequently, not of the opposition program. I spoke exclusively of the internal logic of despotism, Bonapartism, Stalinism.

Trotzkyists, do not think Stalin is a sacred, irreplaceable, lifelong chieftain. Stalin can easily be replaced by Voroshilov, Kaganovitch, etc. Only the movement of the masses themselves can liquidate the fatal present political regime of the U. S. S. R."

Honor Slayer Dies In Florida Hospital

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP).—Edward H. R. Allen, former gentleman jockey of Philadelphia, died in a hospital here today.

Injured severely when thrown from a horse five years ago, Allen had since been a semi-invalid.

Allen was acquitted at a trial in Philadelphia several years ago on a charge of murder for the shotgun slaying of a suitor of his sister Rose. He pleaded self-defense.

Allen was acquitted on a charge of killing Francis A. Donaldson, 23, also socially prominent. Allen's sister, now Mrs. Rose Coolbaugh, of Philadelphia, was then 18. The gentleman jockey charged Donaldson with betrayal of her. She testified for the State.

House, Senate Rift Delays Relief Bill

By the Associated Press.

A disagreement between the House and Senate threatened yesterday to delay a $950,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill, intended to replenish fast-draining relief coffers.

After two hours of discussion, conferees from the two chambers failed to agree about a "rider" which would prohibit legislative investigating committees from borrowing assistants from relief agencies.

This clause, drafted by the House Appropriations Committee, was stricken out Wednesday by a 72-to-0 vote of the Senate.

Members of the conference committee said they believed the House would not accept a substitute, although its supporters claimed White House backing.

Hatton B. Rogers Asks Bankruptcy In District Court

Listing his debts at $238,585.02 and his assets at $105.50, Hatton Brown Rogers, 2310 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday asked District Court Jurtice F. D. Letts to adjudicate him a voluntary bankrupt. His assets consisted of wearing apparel and an unpaid salary claim from the Government service.

Through Attorney Harry A. Grant he filed a schedule listing many worthless bank stocks and cited the possibility that other bank stocks he owned might cost him money through stock assessments on those that were represented by closed institutions.

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP).—Hatton Brown Rogers is a former Atlanta and Tampa banker. He came to Tampa in October, 1924, to become president of the National Bank of Commerce. The Bank of Commerce was taken over by the defunct Citizens Bank. Rogers remained with the Citizens until 1929.

Four Found Dead In Burned Plane

Belfast, Ireland, Feb. 4 (AP).—An airplane owned by a London newspaper was found by a shepherd today near Newton-Stewart, Scotland, wrecked and burned, its four occupants dead.

The plane, carrying two newspapermen and a photographer in addition to the pilot, had been unreported since it left Glasgow, Scotland, early Tuesday, en route to Liverpool.

The men had been making a survey over a new air route recently suggested by a parliamentary committee.

Control of Erie, Nickel Plate Is Sought by Ball

Van Sweringen Railroads' Head Asks Permission to Acquire Stock.

By the Associated Press.

An application to the Interstate Commerce Commission indicated yesterday that George A. Ball, new commander of the Van Sweringen railroad empire, may knit the system's sprawling corporate structure into a more directly-controlled organization.

The C. & O., crack road in the Van Sweringen setup, asked authority to wipe out an intermediate link in its control over the Nickel Plate and Erie railroads.

Under the proposal, the C. & O. would acquire from its subsidiary, the Virginia Transportation Corporation, stocks which would give it control of the Nickel Plate and Erie.

It would pay $550,000 plus interest for the shares, and after the transaction would own 75 per cent of the Nickel Plate and 55 per cent of the Erie stock.

Railroad authorities here said the move yesterday will give the C. & O. a close working control over the Nickel Plate and the Erie. Through his holdings in the C. & O., Ball will be in a position to coordinate operations more quickly and flexibly.

Although there was no hint as to what action the I. C. C. might take, rail spokesmen said the proposed move is in accord with the commission's consolidation program.

Sound Pictures Defend Murder Trial Defendant

Los Angeles, Feb. 4 (AP).—Through the medium of "talkies," a defendant in a murder trial told a jury here today he did not kill the victim.

Motion pictures, with sound, showed Robert Hayes, charged with murder of David Monroe, being questioned by two detectives. The jury heard Hayes deny he killed Monroe. The State charges he murdered Monroe when accused of stealing a chicken. It was the first time sound pictures have been used in court here.

Pilgrims Plan Tribute Today To Evangelist

Thousands Gather in Chicago to Honor Memory of Dwight L. Moody.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Thousands of the faithful gathered today to honor the memory of Dwight L. Moody, the Evangelist who carried the Gospel to 100,000,000 persons.

From cities scattered through the United States and Canada and from 15 foreign countries they came to participate in ceremonies commemorating the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Similar, but smaller, groups will observe the centennial throughout the world this year.

Mass Tribute Today.

Tomorrow night, the pilgrims will assemble in the 12,000-seat Coliseum to pay mass tribute to the short, stout, dark and bearded man who forsook the business of selling shoes for his chosen work of saving souls.

Moody was born February 5, 1837, in East Northfield, Mass. At 17, he left home, learned the shoe business in Boston and migrated to Chicago. He opened a Bible class. The first members were urchins he corralled on the streets and tipplers he coaxed from saloons. His public and his reputation grew. He moved to larger quarters.

Abraham Lincoln, en route from Springfield to Washington for his inauguration, paid him a visit.

Eventually he set off on a preaching trail that was to take him almost 1,000,000 miles through America and the British Isles.

His meetings were crowded. He didn't shout of fire and brimstone. He didn't saw the air with wildly flailing arms. Instead, he appealed to logic in a practical, persuasive manner.

His sphere of influence grew apace. In 1889, he established the Moody Bible Institute here.

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—A campaign for a great religious revival in Britain will be launched tomorrow on the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of the famous American evangelist, Dwight L. Moody.

Austrian Break With Germany Believed Near

Attacks on Nazi Policies Grow; Nationalists Create Problem.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Feb. 4.—Germany and Austria, well informed sources believed today, are near the parting of the untroubled way they have traveled since the friendship accord of July, 1936.

While reports spread that a cabinet shake-up was imminent, the Austrian press apparently kicked over the Austro-German press truce that came hand in hand with the July agreement. Attacks on Nazi policies and the Austro-German commercial accord appeared in several newspapers.

The formation of a new nationalist organization, ostensibly a "cultural" association, was said to be the source of trouble within the government of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg.

Two to Be Dismissed.

These informed sources said they believed Odo Neustaedter-Stuermer, minister of security, and the pro-German Dr. Edmund Glaise-Horstenau, minister of the interior, were slated for dismissal from the cabinet.

Observers said Austria was disgruntled with the German accord but was afraid to make a move to disturb Central European relations, and Italy was prodding Austria to keep up at least the semblance of Austro-German friendship lest the international commercial balance waver.

New Problem Seen.

Some observers thought the Nationalist organization soon would be disclosed as having Nazi sympathies, creating a new problem under the July accord which recognized internal political developments, including Austrian Nazism, as domestic problems.

Neustaedter-Stuermer and Glaise-Horstenau were said to have differed over whether Nazis, including 18,684 released from custody or investigation under the July accord, should be organized into a revived pan-German organization or into cultural, non-military groups.

Subterfuge Seen In A. T. & T. Action

By the Associated Press.

A statistician for the Federal Communications Commission testified yesterday that the long lines department of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. "evidently" had divested itself of intra-State long-distance business to escape State regulation.

Sanford F. Smith, of the commission's telephone investigation staff, made the statement at a hearing while discussing a report prepared under his supervision.

Long lines, Smith said, had been engaged almost exclusively in transmitting interstate calls since 1926.

a natural amphitheater formed by the slope of an immense lawn.

The place was ideal for social entertainments, but annually Mr. Corby turned it over to some charity enterprise. It was here each year that the horse show to raise funds for the Washington Home for Incurables was held. The Boy Scouts of Washington also held a yearly jamboree of stunts and games here.

Mr. Corby was educated in the public schools and at the University School in Washington. He later was graduated from the Wharton School of Finance at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Corby was a native of Washington. His children, Mary Ellen and Karl W. Corby, jr., have been raised here and in nearby Maryland. Mary Ellen, who graduated from Ogontz School, near Philadelphia, made her debut here last December.

The daughter accompanied her father and mother to Florida. The son is a student at the Lawrenceville School, at Princeton, N. J.

The funeral will be held on Monday, but other than that no plans have been made.

Loss to Community.

B. B. Sandidge, superintendent of Emergency Hospital, where Mr. Corby was president of the board of directors, made the following statement:

"It is needless for me to say what a loss the community has suffered by Mr. Corby's death, for his unusual activities in community life coupled with his ability and understanding will be greatly missed. He was quick to grasp a situation, thorough in his consideration and just in his decisions.

"The Emergency Hospital, in which he was so deeply interested, has lost a great president, the people a true friend, and I feel a personal loss as well. It was a real pleasure to work under Mr. Corby, and I regret his passing."

5 Millions More Sought for Dock

Rear Admiral Norman M. Smith, said he told a House committee yesterday Congress would have to authorize an additional $5,000,000 before the Navy could start work on its largest floating drydock at Pearl Harbor, Hawii.

Admiral Smith, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, testified at an executive session of the subcommittee on naval appropriations.

"It is up to the President and Congress to say when we can go ahead," he said.

Congress in 1935 appropriated $10,000,000 for the 1,016-foot dock, to be the world's largest. The lone bid on its construction, submitted in November, totaled more than $21,000,000, and the Navy then turned to estimates by the Bremerton, Wash., and Mare Island, Calif., Navy Yards.

Admiral Describes Navy Air Activities

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—The airplane is as much an integral part of the Navy today as battleships, cruisers, destroyers or submarines, Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics told 150 leaders of the aviation industry at a luncheon of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America today.

"Aviation today is on the threshold of revolutionizing the world's transportation system and may completely change the science of war," the admiral said. "Our naval aviation has become our first line of defense, and a service unequaled among other navies."

The present program, he said, calls for 1,910 airplanes by 1942, and of this number, 1,705 will be available by the end of this year.

Lindbergh Spends His 35th Birthday In the Eternal City

Rome, Feb. 4 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh spent his thirty-fifth birthday in the Eternal City today.

Although earlier it had been expected he and Mrs. Lindbergh would continue their air tour, probably flying southward on their way to visit Gen. Italo Balbo in Tripoli, the flying couple remained tonight at the home of Dean Chester H. Aldrich, of the American Academy.

There was no indication when they would continue their journey, the destination of which is reported to be Cairo, although mechanics refueled their orange and black monoplane today.

95% of Movie-Goers Stupid, Pearl Buck Tells Conference

Author Declares Many Good Plays Fail Because They Interest Small Number; Scores Mass Mind Censorship.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Pearl Buck, writer, charged today that 95 per cent of theater audiences were unintelligent and that "organized censors are less a menace than the enormous, stupid, insistent censorship of the mass mind" demanding trashy books, plays and movies.

Addressing the thirteenth annual conference of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures on "what censorship has meant and means," the author of "The Good Earth" characterized the average motion picture as "abominable fodder * * * in which Clark Gable makes love at a big salary."

She urged establishment of a new system of writing and movie producing alongside the present system, if necessary, with artists making quality products "for honor, not for money," for audiences as limited as 5,000 in the case of books and 10,000 in the case of movies.

"In the theater," Miss Buck said, "only 5 per cent of the audience is intelligent. A good play fails because the rest aren't interested in it.

"They want the same thing over and over again. They want everything to turn out all right in the end for the man and the girl. Producers can't produce plays for the 5 per cent. They must make pictures on a big scale so that the stupidest audience can see that millions of dollars were spent on it."

Assailing what she averred was a tendency of moving pictures and popular fiction always to strive for the happy ending and ignore unhappiness and such problems as "interracial marriages and hard times," Miss Buck said:

"I would like to know how many cases of insanity and suicide had their beginning in the false morality of pictures, books and magazines."

Oil to Be Scarce As Bison in U. S.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Dr. Frank B. Jewett, president of Bell Telephone Laboratories, said in an address tonight that the quest for oil and other mineral resources in the United States was likely soon to be "as unremunerative * * * as hunting for bison."

It appeared likely, he added in accepting on behalf of the laboratories the gold medal of the American Institute, "we are nearing the limit of our three-dimensional exploration beneath the surface of the earth."

The gold medal, given annually, went to the laboratories for researches in electrical science. A fellowship in the institute was awarded Watson Davis, director of science service and a member of the National Association of Science Writers.

The Auditorium.

When Congress desires, it can act on improvements for Washington with remarkable dispatch. Less than two weeks have elapsed since Senator Robinson introduced his bill to establish a Capital Auditorium Commission. The Senate has already approved it and, now stamped with committee approval, it goes to the floor of the House.

The general enthusiasm for the auditorium should also insure more immediate results from the commission than those produced by other bodies previously appointed to study District needs. One of its first and most important decisions will be the site to be recommended. A letter in adjacent columns criticizes the proposed location for the National Gallery of Art from the viewpoint of the parking problem. This consideration should weigh even more heavily in respect to an auditorium which will draw thousands to its doors on single occasions. As to whether the building should be a memorial to Thomas Jefferson, the fact that Congress has already authorized a commission to recommend some honor for the third President, together with a $3,000,000 construction fund, seems to argue for it.

Objections based on the utilitarian character of an auditorium are heard. The reply is that the city is already overloaded with none-useful and, too often, non-ornamental shrines. The suggestion that there is anything unworthy, or ipso facto inartistic, about a monument with useful values, is downright silly.

The Need For A Power Policy.

Negotiations for renewal of contracts for sale of TVA power to the Commonwealth and Southern companies have become deadlocked, and representatives of TVA and the private utilities are now engaged in that game of bluffing which Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the TVA, so effectively denounced in a recent statement. His eloquent plea for open inquiry and impartial analysis of the power problem has evidently fallen on deaf ears.

In the long run the private utilities will be the chief sufferers in an open contest with a Government agency like the TVA. For the time being, however, they are in a position to "crack the whip" by threatening to substitute their own steam-generated power for that heretofore purchased from TVA. As the latter organization has been temporarily enjoined from expanding its activities, the consummation of this threat would deprive it of a market for much of its power. Of course, the present stalemate is untenable and intolerable and some way out of the impasse will no doubt soon be found. The main question is whether it will be a rational solution, or otherwise.

Acrimonious interchanges serve no purpose except to emphasize the necessity of a well-defined power policy providing a basis for settling disputes between publicly and privately owned agencies. So long as the private power companies in the Tennessee Valley are left in ignorance of the intentions of the Government, they will inevitably be seriously handicapped in carrying on negotiations for the purchase of TVA power.

Obviously, the private companies are in no position to determine the amount of purchased power they could use over any considerable period of time unless they have some assurance that the Government will not either directly or indirectly invade the territories which are served by this purchased power. The absence of a definite program, moreover, prevents the private companies from obtaining investment support which would enable them to refund outstanding obligations and finance needed construction on easy terms.

The situation is not one calling for ultimatums on the one hand and defiance on the other. That attitude leads to destructive competitive contests in a field where competition results in costly duplication of facilities and impaired efficiency in operation. Regardless of whether a power company is under private or public management, distribution areas have to be defined with reference to the requirements of economical service.

There are any number of possible equitable solutions of the power problem. Working arrangements between public and private concerns might take the form of a pooling of resources; or private companies might be acquired at fair valuations or else permitted to operate under reasonable regulatory laws within well-defined distribution areas. But whatever is done should be done openly, in accordance with policies known to all.

Intelligent Planning.

The National Resources Committee has submitted recommendations for a six-year program of public works, together with proposals for an inland waterways control and development program. To give effect to the proposed policy of long-range planning it follows the recommendations of the Brownlow Committee in urging a permanent public-works organization as well as a permanent advisory national resources board. The latter would correlate plans within the Federal Government and relate them to State and local projects. In fact, the committee is concerned with national planning in a literal sense, not simply with Federal undertakings.

There appears to have been some misunderstanding of the purpose and nature of these recommendations. The committee is not presenting a program calling for immediate budgetary outlays of a specific amount within the next five or six years. It is simply outlining a careful method of procedure to replace present slipshod methods in appropriating public funds. Indeed, one of the great advantages of announcing a program in advance lies in the fact that outlays can more easily be adjusted up or down, from year to year, according to changing economic conditions.

In other words, the committee envisages a long-range spending plan that can be controlled without ever losing sight of the main objective, which is to provide the country with needed public improvements. It is a program to replace our present unco-ordinated, planless construction activities, designed chiefly to make work. And it is at the same time designed to fit each local project, most of which would presumably be locally financed, into a general development plan embracing not merely waterways and public buildings but all types of public works.

As a logical outgrowth of this objective, the committee would vest in the permanent public-works agency large discretionary powers to allocate lump-sum budgetary appropriations to approved projects. By such means the pork-barrel methods of apportioning funds would, it is hoped, be largely eliminated. The aim is well summed up in a foreword explaining that our governmental agencies, national, State and local, spent over $3,000,000,000 on public works in 1930. It is assumed, therefore, that we shall send about $30,000,000,000 during the next decade for development and control of our natural resources and for new public construction.

The problem which the committee has undertaken to examine in its detailed report is how to safeguard these investments, how to spend wisely, how to time spending and how to correlate Federal with State and local projects. It is not presenting a new spending program for consideration, but merely indicating how the money that we expect to spend can be laid out to best advantage.

Such a program is overdue. The National Resources Committee is to be congratulated on the detailed study it has prepared in conjunction with the State and local planning boards. The report, a most thorough and impressive piece of research, is an admirable example of Federal leadership, operating through well-established State agencies.

A District Merit System.

A committee of the American Municipal Association is investigating the problem of social security for 2,400,000 employes of State and local governments. Since these groups are excluded from the Administration's social security program, along with farm hands, domestics and seasonal laborers, ways and means are being sought to guarantee them equivalent benefits.

It is entirely logical, of course, that State and city employes should remain outside of the social security system designed for private enterprise. Congress could not constitutionally require the States to provide old-age benefits and unemployment insurance for their own employes. And even if that were legally feasible, it might not be desirable.

As a matter of fact, the chief purpose of the social security act is to extend to private employes some of the protection as to tenure and retirement which most modern governments already provide for their own personnel. If a classified civil service plan is properly operated, along with an adequate retirement system, it provides all the security that can be reasonably demanded. A move to strengthen local merit systems would seem to be a far more promising step, therefore, than any attempt to extend social security acts to public job holders.

Especially is this true in the District. Civil service rules are applied here only because of an agreement between the local Commissioners and the Civil Service Commission. No such expedient can offer the protection and incentive for advancement that are essential to a genuine career service. Washington ought to have a merit system of its own based on a special act of Congress. Consideration of the far-reaching changes in the Federal personnel system recommended by the Brownlow report will afford a convenient opportunity to press for that reform.

Shadows Over WPA.

It was by mere coincidence that President Roosevelt sent the six-year public works program to the Capitol while the Senate was passing a deficiency bill carrying another three-quarters of a billion for relief. Yet the casual nature of the whole WPA set-up is emphasized by this careful effort of the National Resources Committee to plan and co-ordinate useful public enterprises so as to provide jobs where work is really needed, in the degree that it is needed.

Senator Bailey pleaded with his colleagues to stop the still undiminished extravagance of the WPA. He repeated the irrefutable arguments against breakdown of local responsibility and called attention to the staggering load of taxes that will eventually have to be carried by the worker, the farmer and the consumer. But the Senate gave no heed, beyond tacitly admitting the justice of the North Carolinian's indictment through the weakness of the rebuttal.

If a comprehensive public works policy is to be adopted, a coincident step must be a tapering off of the WPA. Obviously, Congress cannot vote new outlays for flood control and other features of the proposed six-year plan which would demand Federal funds while continuing to spend billions for makeshift projects to create temporary jobs. That would simply afford a short-cut to bankruptcy.

The argument for scientific planning of public works, strong as it is, can be no more cogent than the correlative demand for termination of slap-dash work relief activities. Boondoggling, even in times of emergency, is of no substantial or permanent value. To continue a system which encourages that type of wasteful expenditure, after a comprehensive national plan of public works has been completed, would be tantamount to sabotage of the more constructive program.

Perhaps it was too much to expect any substantial change of policy in the enactment of a deficiency bill. As Senator Vandenberg pointed out, however, one of Congress' chief responsibilities in shaping the 1938 budget will be development of a new relief system that will emphasize local obligations to care for destitute persons who cannot be absorbed into the public works program. In fact, such a move seems to be necessary to consideration in good faith of the President's new public-works policy.

The Invisible Man.

Photography could scarcely be called an art in the days when grandfather posed with his head in a clamp, hoping he might be identified by his watch fob. But it soon caught up with painting as technique advanced. It passed the stage of realism, took a highly introspective turn with the development of the X-ray, and now threatens to go Surrealist.

A Los Angeles Junior League photographer, we are reliably informed, has set up in business as a "soul photographer." The purpose is to catch on her films "the quintessence of the personality," free from incidentals like hair, make-up, or clothing. "The soul," she explains, "is a nudist." It sounds extraordinarily like Reginald Buntborne, in "Patience."

To win a certain type of approval, it is not enough for a vogue to be merely absurd. It must also be exclusive. The soul photographer's pictures are not in the same class of nudity with Parisian postcards and burlesque advertisements. By omitting other fishy incidentals as well as clothing they lose popular appeal as they gain the authentic cachet. Certainly it isn't very exciting to read that the new photography reduces the alluring Merle Oberon to a thin ray of light punctuated by an eye.

Movie fans need not worry, therefore, that Hollywood studios will adopt this fad from the Junior League salons. Film magnates realize that they drove many stars into obsolescence by changing from silent to talking pictures. The adoption of soul photography by the screen would cause far greater technological unemployment.

At best it would be difficult to get a composite soul portrait of such inseparables as the Marx Brothers or Laurel and Hardy. In other cases that might be mentioned the negatives would show a complete blank. And, finally, the box office is not going to tolerate any substitutions of astral appeal for sex appeal.

The problem of what to do with certain types of workers grows more complex as the days go by. If they have no jobs, they lie down on the Government, and when employment is secured for them, they sit down on their employers.

For days at a time we can go along and not shed a single tear over Trotsky's so-called plight. A man without a country can't be so terribly situated if that country is Russia.

A Texas evangelist has published a list of 723 sins. We're writing for a copy of it, as it is barely possible that we may be missing something.

For Mr. St. Louis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. George St. Louis jibed at Mr. Lanier because Mr. Lanier "has not yet stumbled on that phrase in the Constitution dealing with the right of American citizens to 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.'"

I challenge Mr. St. Louis to answer the following questions:

1. In what article and section of the Constitution did he stumble on the phrase "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness?"
2. Does he know how many times the Constitution specifically provides for the protection of personal property?
3. Prior to seeing this letter, how many times has he read the Constitution?

$3,500-$4,500 A Year.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:: I just can't refrain from writing a few words in reply to a letter published in The Post of February 2 and signed by A. H. Cate—the article captioned "Middle Bracket Salaries." The writer states "that one of the worst injustices done by the Government is to its employes in the salary classes ranging from $3,500 to $4,500 a year." Personally, I have never drawn one dollar from the Government in salary or otherwise, but from my observations of more than 30 years simply looking in from the outside I have formed a belief that Uncle Sam is a most generous and considerate employer.

The employes seem to try to do as little as they can for as much as they can get. However, the writer referred to states that the employes in the very modest salary bracket of from $300 to $400 per month, are middle-aged, have children of college age they are trying to educate, etc., and in all fairness should have salaries sufficient to enable them to live in comfort and educate their children and give them a chance in the world. If these people getting such, I should say, handsome salaries, plus 30 days' sick leave, plus 30 days' annual leave, are not satisfied why don't they step down and out and get jobs elsewhere paying them more and permit the people who would appreciate such jobs a chance to worry along on a mere $3,500 to $4,500 a year?

A READER.
Washington, Feb. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are many injustices done in the fixing of salaries of the employes of the several Federal agencies and corporations which are not under Civil Service, but none so great as in the classes ranging from $3,500 to $4,500 a year. There are now many capable men in these classes who previously earned from $6,000 to $10,000 a year, but who were forced by the effects of the depression and other causes to apply for and take whatever positions they could get with the agencies and corporations just mentioned.

There is no doubt that if an investigating committee of Congress should examine the personnel files of the $3,500 to $4,500 a year employes injustices would immediately be disclosed for attention and correction. Would it not be a fine thing if the President should suggest to Congress that such an examination be made?

Lost Dog Returned.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you so much for your free advertising of the dog found. She has been joyfully reunited with her mistress. More people should avail themselves of your generous service since you advertise an animal that has been found free of charge. More pets would then be recovered by their owners.

As the poem states, "Oh, the saddest of sights in a world of sin, Is a little lost pup with his tail tucked in." And to befriend one and restore it to its owner is a joy all should experience.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A friend of mine has just sent me a copy of The Post of December 21, in which appears an editorial entitled "The Crisis in Cuba."

Please accept my congratulations for the clear vision of the Cuban problem as shown in this article and for the splendid defense of democracy. At the same time, may I express my gratitude for the words of praise concerning myself.

The Trotskyites.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The trial appears fantastic to Americans who are fortunate enough to reside in a so-called democratic nation with a minimum of international enemies—but Soviet Russia has many international enemies, and nothing is more logical than to believe that disgruntled egotists of the Trotsky type would not be above betraying their people and nation for the sake of "getting even" with the men and the government that put across a job they were too little or too hesitant to accomplish. Even the liberal New Republic remarks that ". . . it seems to us that the weight of the evidence supports Mr. Duranty's view."

At a time when democracy is fighting for life against fascism in America and abroad, it is a disgusting sight to find the Trotskyites putting their strength on the side of reaction because of their immature political judgment and juvenile hero worship of a man who lost his greatness because he could not lose his ego, not even for the sake of the fatherland he once defended. It is a privilege of your correspondent, Mr. Hall, to remain in the company of White Guards and Social Democrats if he prefers fascism to liberty, but to disparage the Popular Front is to disown all the qualities of brotherhood he may pretend to have. Had there been a "popular front" in China there would have been no Chiang Kai-shek. A "popular front" in Germany would have stopped Hitler. The Trotskyites are the murderers of each other, blame no one else.

Professionalizing Sports.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a lover of amateur and professional sports I am horrified by the spectacular accidental killing of that promising boy in a recent boxing bout. It is of a piece with, and the necessary outcome of, all the commercialization and professionalizing of so-called amateur sports in this country.

All amateur contests, notably football, as now developed, make an inordinate drain on the vitality of the players. This necessitates an excess amount of preliminary training in order that the players may be put in reasonably fit condition to withstand the minor rigors of the contests. The record of serious permanent injuries to, and the numbers of annual deaths of, these thoughtless youths is appalling, and demonstrates that amateur sports as now practiced are so professionalized that only maturely developed professionals should be allowed to participate in them.

This is quite apart from the degradation and commercialization of our educational institutions involved. We have too much lost sight of the fact that colleges and universities are primarily institutions for the mental development of their students.

I played center on the first lacross team of Johns Hopkins University and continued to play until I got my degree. In all those years no participant on either side was ever so seriously injured that he couldn't complete the game. We played for sport's sake, and got a lot of fun out of it. Why? Because we played as amateur gentlemen should. When a professional from The Shamrocks, of Montreal, tried to get us to adopt the "Mucker" methods used by his professional comrades we would have none of them and never reengaged his services. We wore no armor, as now—the most protection anyone resorted to was an old kid glove. Besides, we furnished and paid for our own equipment—sticks, uniforms, etc. And we had no training table. But we had a grand time.

The introduction of the football methods and the armor of professionals has ruined the beauty of the game of lacrosse.

The Site For The Art Gallery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May a fool layman rush in where planning angels of the Nation's Capital have feared to tread, and thrust his head brazenly into the mouth of Mr. Mellon's gift-horse? A noble thoroughbred it is: a gift which will make the donor's name blessed by generations to come. Yet careful inspection of the aforesaid mouth reveals two very bad teeth which appear to need immediate attention.

At Mr. Mellon's own insistence, his art gallery is to be placed along the north side of the Mall, abutting on Constitution avenue, blocking Sixth street. Inherent in this location are the twoscore spots in the gift-horse's maw. Public attention has already been called to the serious effect on traffic of thus eliminating a badly needed through street. Publicity has not been given, however, to the parking problem involved in this site. It is high time that parking problems cease to be waved airily aside, as has been the case with most of the vast structures involved in the recent public building program. The present location for the gallery will permit little or no parking within the site; no possibility of future expansion for the building itself. Parking along Constitution avenue and North Mall or Vista Drives is undesirable if not impracticable. Mr. Mellon would not only eliminate an important traffic artery, but would clutter with parked cars streets which are needed for vehicular movement.

Is there any equally good site which would not involve such objections? There are some who think so. The best location would seem to be the triangular tract bounded by Independence, Virginia and Maryland avenues. Eventual removal of the Smithsonian Institution and the Old National Museum would open up the foreground for the new gallery. The place hitherto reserved for a "National Gallery"—though perhaps too small for Mr. Mellon's gift—would be more than adequate for a new Smithsonian. This site lies between Twelfth and Fourteenth, along the Mall. The Independence avenue site would interfere much less with traffic than would the proposed one, and would permit extensive parking nearby. In the remote contingency that this plot of ground should eventually prove inadequate for gallery needs, bridging across Independence avenue would offer copious space for wings extending toward South Mall Drive.

If Mr. Mellon would have history vote him as far-sighted and wise as he was generous, he will waive personal preference for a site chosen without regard for external consequences, and will allow time for deliberation as to the best possible location for his munificent gift.

Boy Or Girl?

An editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

VARIOUS theories have been offered in explanation of the well known fact that the number of male births always exceeds that of female births. Although the biologic processes that ultimately determine the preponderance of males as compared with females at birth are imperfectly understood as yet, it is possible to study the relation to such purely external factors as age, nationality and social status of the parents, and to primogeniture and size of the family, seasonal and secular trend, and the extent to which it is influenced by cross-breeding, migration and social upheavals. Such was the purpose of the study recently reported by Russell.

The association between the degree of urbanization and the size of the sex ratio has concerned some writers on the subject. The evidence obtained from English data with regard to the higher proportion of masculinity in the rural areas as compared with urbanized centers is supported by the available statistics in the United States. The difference in favor of the rural areas is greater than would be expected to arise by mere chance.

A possible explanation of the higher ratios of live births in rural areas as compared with urban centers is a probable lower incidence of abortions in the former, superadded to the undoubted fact that the proportion of still births to total live births is lower in the country than in the town. Some investigators have stressed the fact that the sex ratio of illegitimate births is smaller than that of live births. The English statistics, however, reveal an index for illegitimate births almost identical with that for legitimate ones.

A study of the seasonal variation of the index in England and Wales supports the general belief in the absence of any seasonal correlation. However, the statistics for the urban and rural divisions of the United States for the period 1921-1924 and for New York City for 1929-1933 reveal evidence of a definite trend. In each area the sex ratio is lowest in the first quarter, attains its maximum in the second, and then gradually declines; hence the American statistics, contrary to the experience in England, support the view that conception occurring from July to September is favorable to increased masculinity.

In some countries, particularly Greece, the masculinity of births is exceptionally high; in others, Japan and Italy, low; and there is evidence that the ratio may be influenced through such a factor as migration. Births resulting from marriages of the same nationalities in foreign lands result in a lower sex ratio than those occurring in the home land. There is no satisfactory evidence obtainable that marriage of different nationals, or what may be termed crossbreeding, influences the index.

Social upheavals do influence the index. In countries that were affected by the World War, the sex ratio was high. It was higher after the termination than during the war. Neutral countries experienced the same phenomenon but not to such an appreciable degree. The ratio is higher among first born children and declines with increased family size. In England and Wales the masculinity ratio is definitely correlated with social status; i. e., the index decreases in size with descent in the social scale.

There appears to be no conclusive evidence that the sex ratio is related to the age of the parents, but any relationship that may exist is with the age of the father rather than with the age of the mother. The biologic fact of the preponderance of male births in the human race is an established one, but its purpose is still a matter of debate.

Child Marriages.

Americans have been shocked by the marriage in Sneedville, Tennessee, of a little 9-year-old girl to a strapping 6-foot mountaineer of 22. The circumstances seem but little mitigated by the statement of the child's mother that the couple are not actually living as man and wife. For a people who were horrified not long ago by reading of the custom of child marriages in India, it seems incomprehensible that the law would permit such an alliance.

Tennessee is the only State in the Union in which there is no statutory law fixing a marriageable age, either with or without consent. The nearest approach is in nine other States—Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Louisiana, Maryland, New Jersey, Rhode Island, South Dakota and Washington—in which the common law prevails, making the age with consent 14 for men and 12 for women. North Carolina by a statute fixes the same age. In 23 States the marriagable age for women with consent is 16. New York can be none too proud of its law which permits girls of 14 to marry with the consent of their parents.

Criticism has at least resulted in the introduction of a bill in the Tennessee Legislature making it illegal for a child under 16 to wed. It should be pressed to immediate passage. If our pretensions to civilization are to be borne out, the Legislatures of the many other Commonwealths with antiquated statutes on this important social question should proceed at once to set a minimum marriageable age at 16. Our representatives at Albany should give this matter their immediate attention.

The Parrs Of Alton.

French Lick, Ind.

ALTON, IND., where the Coast Guard boats tied up to a tree in front of the church to spend the night, is strictly a river town off the railroad and connected with the world outside by a paved road, which was cut off by backwater. There is some farming there on land which is rated as submarginal and tentatively marked for purchase by the Government and retirement from active service, but otherwise the Ohio River is the means of existence.

Lije Parr, known as Chig, 26 years old and a high school alumnus, came alongside in a shallow skiff, and asked, "Where is the man who wants to get out?"

They speak with an accent in Alton which is neither true Hoosier nor downright hillbilly but an interesting combination, but this is not to suggest that Alton is Tobacco Road. Education is rife, and in normal times there is a public bus service to take the young ones to and from the Consolidated School and the high school.

Chig Parr led off through the mud and up a long hill in the dark along a course which seemed to be a creek bed, but proved to be the old road, abandoned ten years ago when the improved road was showed through. He walked fast and said he was used to it and could keep going all day, and as he walked he talked of fishing and the game to be hunted in the woods around, including 'possum, 'coon and birds, and of his grandmaw, who died recently. Grandmaw Parr was 100 years 3 months and 14 days old when she died of pneumonia after two days' illness. She had lived all her days right there on the Ohio River and had seen some great floods and some history since 1836.

* * * *

SHE WAS QUICK as a bird until her final illness, but Chig said he never talked to her much about the old days because she was hard of hearing, and that made conversation difficult. So there is no saying what was lost when Grandmaw Parr died, leaving no memoirs of a period in Alton on the river to which there is now no living witness.

Walking easily through mud and over tumbled stones, Chig strode through the dark, mostly uphill and through woods and through the graveyard a mile and a half, as he said—but very long measure—to the home of his brother, where his pony was loose in a field. But his brother told Chig the little mare was lame—which was no wonder, for she had made nine trips out and back in a few days, sometimes carrying double—and Chig therefore caught his brother's mules Kate and Frank.

He threw the pony's saddle on Kate and hopped aboard Frank bareback and led on toward the home of Alvin Hahus, a farmer over at the hard road who had a car and might take a man up to Bedford or French Lick to the telegraph wire.

The trail led through the woods with overhanging branches, down a sharp drop, through a couple of creek beds where Kate belied the hard-tales reputation for surefootedness, and finally up the long ridges to the home of Mr. Hahus, the farmer—who was not at home, but would be any minute.

Mrs. Hahus and her four children sat by the stove, and we talked of the flood and of Grandmaw Parr until Mr. Hahus came in. He was very courteous, and, though it was bedtime for a farmer, he seemed to deem it a Christian duty to help a stranger.

* * * *

MR. HAHUS and his young son, a high school student, gassed her up from a tank in the shed, and as we started he brought up the subject of hawks which proved to be a great interest of his. Mr. Hahus, in fact, is the inventor of the only discriminating hawk trap on the market, which kills the harmful hawk, but spurns the types which destroy vermin and are held to be friends of man.

You bait the trap with chicks about two weeks old, being careful to avoid the glare of the sun, which would kill them, and when the predatory hawk swoops down the trap kills him before he can harm the chicks. So you see it is humane as well as efficient, and it seems a great pity that the Government does not take it up, for the indiscriminate killing of good hawks along with the bad is one of the tragedies of wild life in this country.

But what does Congress do? Nothing. Mr. Hahus has never made a scientific study of birds, but he knows most of the indigenous species by eye and ear, and it is an ambition of his some day to cross Florida through the glades and see those fabulous flocks which darken the sky with their thousands.

The flood was of little interest to Mr. Hahus, for his farm of tired, listless acres is high above the water, but Chig Parr, who works on the river, was nonchalant about it, too. There had been no drownings and floods are routine.

As in the long life of Grandmaw Parr, the river would go back; it always did.

"One thing about these Parrs," Mr. Hahus said, "you can kill 'em, but there's nothing on this earth can scare 'em."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Lines on an Old-Fashioned Man.

William Hohenzollern is 78.
You remember Mr. Hohenzollern;
He was in the War Lord business . . .
(Back in the days when there
Was no competition!)

* * * *

He was Kaiser Wilhelm,
He loved to strut.
In fact he was head strutter
Of his day and age.
He issued ultimatums,
He made warlike gestures,
He was Grade A sword rattler . . .
(Back before it was all the style!)

* * * *

He always had a chip
On his shoulder.
(Chips were scarcer then.
They hadn't become the smart
Thing for shoulder wear

* * * *

He liked to speak from balconies,
He was proud of his chest expansion.
He loved having his photo taken
In war feathers . . .
(Away back in the days when this Was a little unusual!)

* * * *

Wilhelm's delight was
Reviewing his armies.
He could review them all day.
And all night.
In fact he did so.
He thought all true rhythm,
All manly performance
Best expressed through
The Goose Step . . .
(Far back before the idea
Was practically universal!)

* * * *

He finally got a war,
It was a whopper.
(But remember this . . .
It was harder to get a big War in those days!)

* * * *

Now Wilhelm is old and befuddled.
Things don't make sense.
The world benched him as a
Table thumping, ultimatum hurling,
Sword rattling threat to Peace on earth . . .
And what did it get?
A whole flock of 'em!

* * * *

Mr. Hohenzollern can't figure it out.
Neither can we, Willie.
We used to think of you as Head Menace to world peace.
Today you couldn't qualify
On an amateur program.

All you had was the basic idea.
It's been developed now
Into a big business . . .
Royalties!)

Words And Deeds

London Correspondent Balances Eden's Recent Speeches Against His Actions In Non-Intervention Drama.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

MR. EDEN has made another speech, for the record. Once again he has assured us that Britain does not intend to intervene in the Spanish war, quotes as evidence the official ban on volunteers, asserts rightly that this attitude is to the liking of the majority of the people of England, doesn't ask whether this is the usual inertia of a majority. This, he says, is the best we can do to secure the first of British interests, which is that the war shall not spread into Europe.

Our second interest he defined as the preservation of the political independence and territorial integrity of Spain; evidence of the government's efforts to secure this were the Italian agreement and the protest to Germany against German occupation of Morocco. And as a sign that the government was not content with these passive efforts for peace, he warned Germany that until she undertook voluntary political disarmament there would be no economic or financial assistance for her from us.

And yet our actions during the first month of the year seem to have weakened rather than strengthened the hopes for peace which became evident over the Christmas holidays.

Anglo-Italian Pact Contradicts Speeches.

IT'S NOT what we say, but what we do that counts. The Anglo-Italian agreement, for example. It seems that in the discussion which led up to that agreement no reference was made to the Spanish situation and Italian support for Franco. This may seem incredible. Yet precisely the same ability to evade the obvious danger in order to secure the appearance of an agreement was evident at the Stresa conversations early in 1935, when British and French representatives discussed politics with Mussolini without referring to Abyssinia.

Apparently Mussolini could continue to send troops to Spain both during and after the negotiations without breaking his agreement. And he could claim that Britain had joined him rather than the converse, and that respect for the territorial integrity of Spain and for the existing situation in the Mediterranean meant that Britain had agreed with him in opposing adoption by Spain of any left wing government. An integral Spain meant a Franco Spain.

Eden gave the contradiction to this in his last speech. "There is no word, no line, no comma in the Anglo-Italian declaration which could give any foreign power a right to intervene in Spain, whatever the complexion of the government in any part of that country." But Mussolini goes on sending his troops.

Ban On Volunteers Seen As Hypocritical.

THREE OTHER events were found hardly consistent with a desire to secure effective and impartial nonintervention in Spain. While we were still working for a final agreement from Germany and Italy we rushed to impose a unilateral ban on genuine volunteers from England, threw away any bargaining power we might have had to secure the end of official intervention from Germany and Italy. Our hands at least shall be clean, said the government; so did Pontius Pilate, replied critics.

Britain is as interested as France in preventing a German occupation of Spanish Morocco, a territory which is nominally under the Sultan of Morocco, protected by the French, merely leased to the Spanish. Yet instead of taking the lead in making a protest to Germany we egged on the French to do the dirty work.

And when the German, Italian and Portuguese at the nonintervention committee, in order to help Franco, proposed that the gold reserves of the Bank of Spain now held by the legitimate government of Spain, should be impounded, Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the committee, gave Britain's agreement.

One clew to the apparent contradiction between the words of the government spokesman, Mr. Eden, which claims to support nonintervention, and its actions, which appear to support Franco, is that the change in attitude apparent in Foreign Office opinion has not yet spread far enough in the cabinet. Effective nonintervention, whether on the status quo or with withdrawal of foreign volunteers from both sides would mean, in general opinion here, the collapse of Franco. Both sides have the assistance of foreign munitions, airplanes, pilots and officers. Franco needs in addition foreign troops in numbers which greatly exceed the strength of the international column supporting the government.

Yet the Foreign Office, not for love of left wing governments but in long-sighted support of British interests, has been coming around to the necessity of enforcing nonintervention by a naval blockade carried out by the French and British navies, with or without the consent of the Spanish.

Eden Still Declared Far From Baldwinism.

THIS POLICY would be consistent with the known desires of Mr. Eden. The fact that he did not resign after the Hoare-Laval affair is taken as evidence of weakness of character, loyalty to the old school traditions, and not of a conversion to Baldwinism. It has been said that he regrets not having resigned at that time, and has even thought of resigning since. But although resignation then might have thrown out the government, resignation at any time since would have been merely his own eclipse. His most useful method, if he still wished to bring the government to support of the League, was to remain in office and try to leaven the lump.

It was imagined at the new year that his policies were beginning to prevail, not through force of character, but because the stubborn facts of German and Italian behavior had at last convinced the government that they must either enforce nonintervention by a naval blockade, or see Germany control Spain through a Franco puppet. That assumption has been disproved. Instead of choosing blockade, with probable defeat of Franco, the cabinet rushed to adopt a one-sided ban on volunteers, threw its weight as discreetly as possible on Franco's side, in the hope presumably that Franco in power could be won over to Britain by force of moneybags.

Yet the emphasis on no economic assistance for Germany unless she relieves the political tension in Europe is taken by most observers as proof that at some time Britain will stop retreating before Germany. Democracies, says Mussolini fresh from his agreement with Britain, are shifting sands, corrupt, decadent, breeding grounds for communism. Eden's appeal, says the German press, betrays an appalling lack of appreciation of Germany's idealist hatred for bolshevism. No sooner was Mussolini levered away from Germany, than he was back hobnobbing with Goering. Germany and Italy reaffirm their determination to oppose anything strengthening of Communist (which now in their opinion seems to include democratic) influence in the Mediterranean. Against this background the hope in some British circles for a federal compromise in Spain, with Franco in one part, the Republicans in another and the Communist wing nowhere, seems fond to the point of lunacy.

Britain Must Balk Germany Eventually.

THIS demonstration of the value which may be put upon Italian and German assurances strengthens the feeling in London that a turning point against continued aggression must come. It may be this year, next year, or merely some time. It can hardly be never. Particularly since it is becoming increasingly clear that if there is no blockade the German and Italian navies may be able to cut off Russian assistance for the government in Spain while the Italian and German armies win Franco's battles for him.

Only possible check to this would be open intervention by the French to support the government, and some impatient critics of our Government suggest that in order to assist Franco we have accepted the job of acting as blackmail check to France in order to prevent such a development. This is most probably untrue, but our actions have been such that no one can deny with obvious reasonableness that it is beyond the limits of possibility. Yet even those who would approve of such action agree that at some time we must resist Germany. To opose communism in Spain, they say, is not to approve of German dominion over Europe.

Building Act Held Valid.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Supreme Court in a unanimous decision held constitutional today the State authority act, passed by the 1935 Legislature to provide for a $60,000,000 program of construction and repair of public buildings.

Recovery Record.

From an article in a recent issue of the American Swedish Monthly.

A QUESTION one hears frequently asked is "Why does Sweden lead the world in recovery" and, as might be expected, the reasons are both many and complicated. But Sweden has not, as far as I know, found any magic formula except hard work and a fair distribution of the proceeds.

As a rule, too much credit is given to either one or the other of these two phases—production and distribution. The American trend has hitherto been to stress production and let consumption take care of itself.

The Swedish view is that both production and distribution are important. But in order to have something to distribute you must first produce. In this respect Sweden has kept pace with the rest of the world. Taking the output for 1915 as 100, the Swedish volume of production rose in 1929 to 147, or more than double the low point of 72 in the post-war deflation year of 1921. There was a dip in 1932 and 1933, but after that the 1929 figures have been greatly exceeded.

* * * *

IN FOREIGN TRADE Sweden might appear to be handicapped by the lack of colonies. Sweden was once a Baltic empire and one of the great military powers of Europe, but it has never had any overseas colonies that were of any consequence. Even the settlemen on the Delaware, close to 300 years ago, was abortive as far as foreign trade was concerned. Through the Swedish settlers remained, they soon became first Dutch and then British subjects and, finally, American citizens. Until the War for Independence, Sweden supplied them with books and preachers, but never had any exclusive trade privileges.

Sweden, therefore, has to sell its goods in the open international market. It cannot force them on anybody or exclude any competitors. Being a small country with a small variety of high grade resources and located far north, it does not depend on mass production at low wages. It competes, therefore, chiefly on the basis of quality and not price. Most American razor blades, for instance, are made of Swedish steel and so are piano wires and watch springs. The latter are so highly refined that they are worth more than their weight in gold.

* * * *

BEING a seller of specialties, Sweden has a very widely distributed market and that has helped, too. It has its own shipping lines to almost every port in the world, South America as well as South Africa, Australia as well as China. It sells steel wire for valve springs in Detroit and certain grades of wrought iron in Pittsburgh. The cellars for the New York skyscrapers are excavated with the aid of Swedish hollow drill steel and many paper mills in the United States use Swedish pulp. About one-half of the Swedish exports are forestry products and the rest mixed, but chiefly derived in various degrees of refinement from its iron mines. Being what is known as producers' goods, that is raw materials or tools used to make other things rather than goods for direct consumption, they were in demand early in the recovery. Swedish lumber was the first to feel the economic thaw and, as long as there is need for more housing in the world, the demand is likely to continue.

Sweden is a low tariff country and it usually buys more than it sells. It believes in a two-way foreign trade. The recent reciprocity treaty with the United States has greatly stimulated the exchange of goods. The fact that Sweden sells mostly producers' goods and, further, the fact that the United States just now buys more in Sweden than it sells, despite the great Swedish demand for American automobiles, foreshadows a coming boom here. The need for tools or materials for tools, as well as semiraw materials, naturally precedes the demand for the finished product.

NOW SWEDEN has been able to take advantage of this foreign trade situation partly thanks to its monetary policy. Until 1931 it hardly felt the depression, but was then struck by the deflation wave and was forced off the gold standard, which, as it turns out, was most fortunate. It has since then had a managed country. It has prospered while the so-called gold countries have continued to suffer. It has followed the pound sterling and has been able to sell abroad while keeping its cost of living constant at home. As all wage contracts are figured partly in relation to the cost of living, steady domestic prices are naturally of prime importance.

For 30 years collective bargaining has been accepted in Sweden as normal. There have been many strikes for higher wages, but once a labor contract is signed it is obeyed by both parties. A special labor court has been instituted to interpret and enforce such contracts. It enjoys high esteem and is backed by public opinion, as well as by the law. Despite the general boom there are no strikes now.

By organizing for political as well as economic action the Swedish workers as well as the Swedish farmers have improved their lot. Through adult education they have learned how to use their ballots. By entirely peaceful and legal means, using only their right to collective action through organization, they have now obtained the control of the government itself and no one cries "Communism." The workers and farmers are fully as patriotic as the business men and the industrialists. As long as they all take counsel together the country is in safe hands.

Walter Huston

By William Lyon Phelps

A Refined Othello.

The greatest Othello I ever saw was that of Salvini, who made his farewell tour in the United States in 1889. He spoke in Italian and all the rest of the cast in English. I shall never forget his glorious voice with its golden tones, his masculine presence, his barbarian splendor, his overwhelming domination of the stage. I saw him in 1889. Elizabeth Barrett Browning saw Salvini as Othello in 1859, 30 years earlier. In this same year of 1889, her husband, Robert Browning, saw his Othello in London, and the newspapers said the old poet was conspicuous in the audience, cheering and waving his handkerchief during the curtain calls. His wife had been dead nearly 30 years; he must have remembered the time when she sat with him in the audience.

On one night in Boston I saw Othello with Edwin Booth as the Moor and Lawrence Barrett as Iago; and on the next night I saw the play again, with Booth as Iago and Barrett as Othello. Barrett's Othello was better than Booth's and Booth's Iago was a hundred times better than Barrett's.

I saw the Englishman Wilson Barrett play Othello; he was melodramatic, but impressive in certain scenes.

A very fine Othello was Louis James, with his deep bass voice and martial bearing; and young Marie Wainwright was the best Desdemona I ever saw in the theater. She and Louis James together were magnificent; that was 50 years ago.

In the opera by Verdi, although it was an error to make Othello tenor when he should have been bass, the tremendously virile Tamagno as Othello, the beautiful Emma Eames as Desdemona, and the great Maurel as Iago, were absolutely unforgettable. I think Emma Eames was really terrified in the murder scene, and we were afraid he would actually strangle her. His terrible cry "Desdemona! Desdemona, morta!" rings in my ears as I write these words.

Walter Huston is an admirable actor. His acting as Dodsworth so completely identified him with the part, that it is not easy to make an accurate appraisal of his Othello. He gives a consummately finished and highly intelligent interpretation, and is adequate in all scenes, both of cheerful domesticity and jealous agony. If I were to temper my admiration a little, I should say that his Othello is too refined, too much of a gentleman. The essentially noble nature of the Moor is admirably revealed, and the whole performance is one of the events of the present theatrical season.

Is War Imminent?

By Raymond Leslie Buell.

The Post presents the third of a series of articles by the president of the Foreign Policy Association, who has recently returned from Europe.

TODAY one may summarize the international situation in somewhat the following terms: (1) Germany is not technically ready for war, even if it wishes to fight, while the two other aggressive powers, Italy and Japan, wish peace in order to consolidate their recent gains; (2) France, Britain and the Soviet Union are steadily growing stronger, while Britain and France have moved very close together; (3) the German effort to break up the French alliance has failed, and the states of central Europe, as well as Poland and Italy, oppose German expansion to the east. The precarious nature of the October entente between Germany and Italy has been weakened by the Mediterranean understanding of London and Rome.

Nevertheless, the international situation remains highly unstable and dangerous, and none of the underlying problems of Europe has been solved. The world is engaged in a feverish race for rearmament which is bound to lead to economic impoverishment and increase the danger of clashes. The naval limitation treaties of 1922 and 1930 expired in December. Today about 19 per cent of the entire national income of Germany and Soviet Russia is expended for military purposes, 8 per cent in France, 6 per cent in Britain and 2 per cent in the United States.

Although a deadlock exists at the moment, it may be quickly and unexpectedly overturned. If central Europe has a bad crop next year, nazism may again become popular in this area. Should revolt break out in any central European or Baltic state similar to the civil war in Spain—either for internal causes or at German instigation—hostilities would undoubtedly occur between the Soviet Union and Germany because of their proximity to the dispute, even though neither power is technically ready to fight. It is possible that war may also be precipitated on account of the nature of the Hitler regime. A food shortage exists within Germany and the general economic situation seems to be growing more serious. Sooner or later the financial limit of the rearmament program will be reached and, unless Germany finds a productive substitute for this program in international markets of one kind or another, its curtailment may involve social disturbances fatal to the present government.

Rather than risk internal disaster, Hitler may prefer the hazard of another foreign adventure. This danger will be increased if the regime unexpectedly finds its prestige involved in an objective which can succeed only by force.

German Superiority In Arms Sure for 1937.

UNDER a parliamentary democracy prime ministers can be overthrown without disaster; in a dictatorship which has repressed both Parliament and an independent press, one man decides and his decision is inevitably affected not only by the welfare of the country but by his personal position. In the case of Germany the war danger may become particularly intense during the next few months, for during 1937 German rearmament will reach its highest point of superiority over other powers. After that, British and French programs will progressively outdistance Hitler.

Although long term factors are against Germany, short term factors may favor it. Britain and France may feverishly rearm, but if they lack the will to protect Europe as a whole from attack, Germany, by striking a swift and terrible blow may obtain a series of quick victories. Despite the difficulty of localizing a war, Germany might overpower a weak and comparatively friendless adversary before Britain and France summoned up courage to act, and by such means gradually build up a position from which it might be able to reduce stronger adversaries. Should Berlin attack France today, either directly or through Belgium or Switzerland, it would at once be opposed by Britain, but in such an event France does not know whether British help will consist of an expeditionary force or merely naval and air aid. Despite its alliances, Czechslovakia remains uncertain of the type of help which the Little Entente or France will give it, not to mention Soviet Russia. The time consumed in hesitation will work to the advantage of the swift aggressor.

What if Germany, acting on the Hoffman plan, suddenly invaded Lithuania without a declaration of war?"

Berlin may believe that France and Britain would limit themselves to calling a meeting of the League Council and, after debate, organize the application of economic sanctions against a Germany already comparatively self-sufficient League procedure would consume two or three weeks and, even if France mobilized to resist a possible attack on the Soviet Union, the same amount of time might elapse before its army was on a war footing.

Within two or three days a military, air and naval concentration upon Leningrad might be completed—even before the League Council opened its debate. Some Germans believe that Leningrad could be captured by an overpowering blow and that on its fall a mass uprising, fertilized by the foreign propaganda of Ukrainians, kulaks and other Russian emigres, would overthrow the Communist regime. In such a case Russo-German war would be over in a few weeks and the task of starting a counter-revolutionary government in Soviet Russia and distributing its limitrophe territories to other powers would arise, without fear of outside intervention.

Poland's Position Uncertain in Wartime.

POLAND, which at first might attempt to remain neutral, would become greatly alarmed if the Soviet army, in order to cut the German advance through the Baltic, launched a counter-attack through Vilna. In order to safeguard its own territories, Poland might be forced to join Germany and thus overturn the present precarious diplomatic front in Europe. In the Orient, Japan would launch a smashing attack on Siberia, which would increase the danger of Russian defeat. Conservatives in every western country would either approve the Nazi invasion or strongly oppose any League intervention on behalf of the Soviet Union.

Such are undoubtedly the calculations of some members of the Nazi Party and the German general staff. These calculations may prove incorrect—Germany today seems even less informed than in 1914 regarding the attitude of the world. The capture of Leningrad, heavily protected by the Kronstadt base, will be more difficult than it seems; Russians will prove far less ready to revolt against Stalin than the Nazis believe; and League machinery, driven by a more energetic Britain and France and benefiting by experience, may indicate in the future than it can act in an emergency.

If Hitler does not win by striking his swift and overpowering blow, is Germany then doomed? German economy today is better organized for war and public opinion better conditioned than in 1914. The army should soon reach the highest peak of discipline and morale in its history. The government is unhampered by parlimentary procedure, social-democratic obstruction, or a critical press. On the other hand, Germany's strategic position is weaker than it was in 1914, when German divisions could move along internal lines from one strategic point to another with little fear of outside molestation. Today aviation has very largely destroyed this advantage.

No Ally Has Replaced Austro-Hungary Support.

FROM THE political standpoint, Germany is confronted by a Soviet Union far stronger in material force and morale than Czarist Russia. It has found no allies to replace Austria-Hungary. Until it dominates eastern Europe it has no sure sources of the raw materials necessary for a long war. Soviet Russia, for example, could bombard or blockade the mines in northern Sweden from which Germany now procures iron.

On the other hand, France and Britain are closer than they were in 1914. Britain has taken open and precise commitments in regard to the West and has failed to repudiate its general obligations under the Covenant. Unlike conditions in 1914, the labor movement in the European democracies is no longer pacifist and will support a war to resist Nazi aggression. Both Britain and France will make use of the League system to prove Hitler the aggressor and induce the world to employ economic sanctions against Germany.

Germany's hope of success in a long war depends, first, on its ability to seize the raw materials of Eastern Europe and, second on its success in keeping the United States out of the war and drawing Italy and Japan in on its side. Far from believing that America will enter the next war, Germany hopes it will apply mandatory embargoes on all belligerents. Such embargoes would injure but little the war economies of Fascist dictatorships; they would greatly weaken France and Britain, deprive them of the advantages of command of the sea. If Italy and Japan could be induced to join the Reich, and the United States were to adopt a policy of mandatory embargoes, Germany would have a good chance of winning even a long war against France, Soviet Russia and Britain.

While it would be to Japan's interest to settle old scores with the Soviet Union if Germany went to war, Italy's attitude would be more difficult to determine. As in 1915, it would probably sell itself to the highest bidder. Mussolini might join France and Britain in return for Tunis and Egypt; or he might back Germany in return for exclusive influence in Austria and the Balkans or a share of the British Empire—terms which Germany could afford to meet if it succeeded in crushing Soviet Russia.

Thus the international deadlock today is extremely precarious. Unless broken by a constructive political and economic settlement between Germany and the other great powers, the danger of war may increase.

Congress Bloc Moves to Clip Court Powers

Senators Frame 7-to-2 Bill; House Forms Unit to Aid Step.

By Robert C. Albright.

An organized fight to clip the powers of the Supreme Court and lower court judges moved into the open yesterday, with completion of a Senate bill to require a 7-to-2 high court majority in constitutional opinions, and formation of a House bloc to work for the change.

Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, leader of Senate efforts to restrict the courts, said last night he has perfected the first draft of his bill and may offer it today.

A Senate sub-committee, headed by Senator Matthew M. Neely, of West Virginia, was named by Chairman Henry F. Ashurst of the Senate Judiciary Committee to study a proposal by Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, to deny to the lower courts the right to issue injunctions where constitutional issues are involved.

25 Members in Bloc.

On the other side of the Capitol, 25 members organized what they called a "nonpartisan" group to co-operate in any effort the Administration may make to check court powers by legislation.

Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, long an advocate of broader interpretation of the Constitution, was named chairman of a sub-committee to wait on the President.

Appointed to accompany him to the White House were Representatives Knute Hill, of Washington; Robert L. Ramsay, of West Virginia, and H. Jerry Voorhis, of California (Democrats), and Henry G. Teigan (Farmer-Laborite), Minnesota.

Martin Heads Group.

Representative John A. Martin (Democrat), of Colorado, was elected chairman of the general meeting, and announced other meetings will be held. The next conference will be called to receive a report from the subcommittee, he said.

"It was the consensus that something ought to be done to remedy the lack of co-operation between the courts and Congress, that the President pointed out in his message," Martin said.

"Most members seemed to feel that a constitutional amendment would be too slow, and that the court's power to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional could be constitutionally limited by a law requiring a 6-to-3 or a 7-to-2 majority of the Supreme Court to invalidate an act."

Objects to Time Length.

Martin himself is author of a proposal to amend the Constitution to give Congress unquestioned power to legislate in matters affecting agriculture, commerce, labor and wages and hours.

Senator McKellar, who started the Senate off on a round robin constitutional debate last week by discussing his bill, plans to raise the issue again in the Senate today.

He has asked for time to answer charges by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, that such a proposal is "immoral" and "goes deeper than the Constitution."

Other Members Listed.

Besides Neeley, the judiciary subcommittee named to consider McKellar's bill comprises Senator George McGill (Democrat), of Kansas, and Senator George W. Norris (Independent Republican), of Nebraska. McKellar said he will appear before the subcommittee probably early next week.

Senator Ashurst, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, favors a constitutional amendment. A similar view is taken by Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Republican.

Music, Singing And Electrons Occupy Masons

Dancing Follows Scottish Rite Entertainment at Hotel Here.

Music, singing and the peculiar behavior of electrons when knocked about by modern science featured the entertainment and dance held at the Hotel Willard last night by the Scottish Rite bodies of the Valley of Washington. Members of the Scottish Rite hold the event annually in honor of their ladies.

Headlining the entertainment for the evening was the General Electric House of Magic, put on by William A. Gluessing, an electrical engineer.

Gluessing astounded the crowd with an exhibition of electric beams that ring bells and a toy train that he controlled with muttered commands. He demonstrated another type of beam that made a loudspeaker rattle and scream.

Anne Helene Monson, operatic soprano, also entertained. Music for the program and for the dance that followed was furnished by Myer Goldman's orchestra.

Invited to the event by the executive committee of the Scottish Rite were all officers and wives of the District Grand Lodge of Masons, the Grand Lodge of the Royal Arch Masons, the Grand Commandery of the Knights Templar, the masters of all local Masonic blue lodges and the grand chapter officers of the Order of the Eastern Star. Also invited were about 1,000 Scottish Rite Masons in Washington who have membership in lodges elsewhere.

Among those present last night were Past Grand Masters Charles E. Baldwin, Robert S. Regar, Charles Cyrus Coombs (thirty-third degree), Otto Roepke and Harry Cunningham; Elwood P. Morey (thirty-third degree), deputy of the District Supreme Council; the Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer (thirty-third degree), chaplain of the District Grand Lodge; J. Walter Karsner, (thirty-third degree); William Moseley Brown, past grand master of Virginia Grand Lodge; John C. Vineman (thirty-third degree), president of the board of trustees of the local Scottish Rite; Representative Merlin Hull, of Wisconsin; Representative Harry Sauthoff, of Wisconsin; Representative John Murdock, of Arizona; Senator Tom Connally, of Texas; Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York; Walter S. Reed (thirty-third degree), secretary general of the Supreme Council; John R. Cowles (thirty-third degree), sovereign grand commander of the Scottish Rite of the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States, and George B. McGinty (thirty-third degree), master of Mithras Lodge of Perfection of the local Scottish Rite bodies.

New Beam to Aid Fliers Is Shown At College Park

By the Associated Press.

Government and air line officials closely watched demonstrations last night of a new radio beam designed to insure safe landings at fog-bound airports.

The beam swept upward in a long curve from a point on an airport runway at College Park, near Washington. Demonstrators said a pilot could follow it to the runway from a height of several thousand feet merely by centering two indicators on a dial in front of him.

One indicator would show with extreme sensitivity whether he was to the right or left of the beam, they said, and the other whether he was above or below it.

The beam was developed by Dr. Frank G. Kear and Gomer L. Davies, former employes of the Bureau of Standards and now members of the Washington Institute of Technology.

Retired Painter, 70, Commits Suicide

Despondent over ill health, Charles H. Monroe, 70-year-old retired painter, killed himself with illuminating gas yesterday in the bathroom of his home at 1019 North Capitol street.

Monroe was found unconscious by his granddaughter, Ruth Sullivan, who summoned the police and the fire rescue squad. Police said Monroe had stretched a rubber hose from a gas jet and had put the hose under a coat with which he covered himself.

The rescue squad administered artificial respiration, but efforts to revive the man failed. He was pronounced dead by a doctor from Casualty Hospital.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide after he learned the man had said several times he wished someone would "put him out of his misery." Dr. MacDonald said Monroe suffered an intestinal ailment.

Veterans Bureau Spends 10 Million

Richmond, Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—The Veterans Administration expended $10,470,720 in the last year, exclusive of payments made on bonus certificates, John Galleher, director of the National Emergency Council in Virginia, disclosed today.

Living veterans of the various wars were paid a total of $4,606,641, while dependents of deceased veterans received $1,497,698.

Naval and military insurance payments of dependents of 2,916 veterans amounted to $1,893,534.

W. W. Durbin Dies at His Ohio Home; Was Treasury Register

Hemorrhage Is Fatal to U. S. Official Who Began Career as Laborer; Death Comes Shortly After Son's Wife Succumbs.

W. W. Durbin, Register of the United States Treasury, died last night at his home, Kenton, Ohio, of a cerebral hemorrhage. He had gone to his home several weeks ago to rest from his duties in this city.

His death followed by less than 24 hours the death of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Francis W. Durbin, at her home in Lima, Ohio. His son, Francis mourning the death of his wife, was at the elder Durbin's bedside.

Mr. Durbin, in addition to being a lawyer and a politician, was one of the world's leading magicians, with a repertory of more than 3,000 tricks. Experts have said that he might have been as famous as Kellar, Thurston or Herrmann, but he chose to remain an amateur. He was for long president of the International Brotherhood of Magicians.

His rise to the post of Register of the Treasury was romantic. He came to Washington from Ohio more than 50 years ago to take a job as laborer in the Government service. Meantime, he attended law school at night. While working as a laborer, he sometimes was used as a messenger, and the story was told of how he frequently carried bonds from the Secretary of the Treasury to the office of Gen. W. S. Rosencrans, then Register of the Treasury.

Durbin himself was appointed to that post by President Roosevelt in July, 1933. He was one of the original Roosevelt workers in Ohio in the 1932 campaign, and bolted the Ohio delegation to vote for him in the Chicago convention.

'Death Valley' Scott Faces Bigger Suit

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP).—A new separate maintenance suit was filed here today against Walter E. (Death Valley) Scott by his wife, Ella Josephine Scott. She named the famous old prospector's partner, Albert M. Johnson, as co-defendant.

Alimony demands of $2,500 a month, $50,000 attorney fees and $1,000 costs were asked in the new suit, double the amounts asked previously.

Prince Georges Police Bureau Head Selected

Trade Body Head Declares Prominent Politician Will Fill Post.

A prominent politician already has been selected to take charge of the Prince Georges County police department when it is reorganized, W. F. Mulligan, president of the Chamber of Commerce, told the Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations, in session at the Bladensburg Fire House last night.

His statement alarmed the members, who have insisted that when the police department is reorganized, politics must be kept out of it at all costs.

The present police force was criticized by Capt. R. T. W. Duke, of the Edmonston Road Citizens Association. He said only three county policemen have been seen in his neighborhood recently.

"One of these came to have a drink with a friend, another drove out with his girl and a third came to shoot a dog," he said.

Vincent A. Osterman, president of the board of commissioners of Bladensburg and a member of the Washington Police Department for the past 32 years, addressed the Federation and made a bid for the post of chief of the department when it is reorganized.

A child labor amendment was referred to the legislative committee.

No. 1 Rating Given D. C. Kiwanis Club

James M. Lynch, of Florence, S. C., vice president of Kiwanis International, gave the Washington club yesterday a No. 1 rating in service and efficiency among the 1,900 clubs in the United States and Canada.

Mr. Lynch, who spoke at the club's luncheon, said: "In my travels throughout North America I have yet to find a group of men in any club doing more worthwhile service in a cheerful, unselfish way." C. Harold Hippler, of Eustis, Fla., a Kiwanis International trustee, also complimented the club on its activies.

Dwight N. Burnham, certified public accountant, a member of the club, spoke on "Employers' Tax Under the Social Security Act," stressing in particular the Federal old age benefits

Overalls Offered As Official Dress Of U.S. Diplomats

From a representative of the tall-corn State of Iowa, home of one-suit Brookhart, came a suggestion yesterday that American diplomats wear overalls when they attend court functions abroad.

Representative Vincent F. Harrington, a rookie member of the House from Sioux City, offered the sartorial hint, and in so doing, said:

"An all-American outfit like overalls would be pretty impressive. Europeans, seeing the shiny brass buttons on the overalls, might think them to be medals."

The idea came to Harrington after he had read that President Roosevelt, at the suggestion of the State Department, had signed an order forbidding Americans to wear silk breeches or uniforms of any kind at court functions abroad.

White House and State Department protocol officers were astounded at Harrington's overall suggestion. The State Department pointed out that satin pants and other frilly costumes have been under the ban for a "long, long time."

The new order, it was explained, means simply that diplomats must wear the "garbage of an ordinary American citizen." The peculiar word "garbage" caused considerable mirth, but that's the way it reads in the regulations.

Talking to Representative Harrington yesterday one got the impression that he was pulling the collective leg of the State Department.

Queen Reaches Premiere Despite Secretary's Feet

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—Tall "Bobbies" protected Queen Mother Mary from welcoming crowds on her arrival tonight to attend a film premiere—but not from her private secretary.

As a cheering throng, which braved rain to greet the Queen Mother, surged against police barriers, the Honorable Gerald Chichester, her private secretary, leaped forward and accidentally stepped upon her train.

The Queen Mother stopped short. As Chichester in confusion removed his weight from the train, the royal party moved forward.

Patuxent River Flood Control Asked of U. S.

Reclaiming of Valuable Lands Near Laurel Seen as Result.

Thousands of acres of valuable land southeast of Laurel, Md., lie idle because of the periodic floods of the Patuxent River, former Mayor James H. Preston, of Baltimore, told War Department engineers at a hearing on flood control at Laurel yesterday.

At present assessed at only $10 an acre, this land, Preston said, would be worth at least $100 an acre if it could be cultivated without fear of floods.

Gustavus B. Timanus, former Mayor of Laurel, declared that for 50 years this vast expanse of uncultivated land had been enriched by fertile topsoil carried by the Patuxent from the rich farming lands of Montgomery and Harford counties.

River Dredging Asked.

Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, of the Fifth District, headed the group of farmers and landowners in the Laurel area in requesting that the river be dredged to a sufficient depth to prevent the frequent inundations.

Capt. Emile Antonovich, utilities officer at Fort George Meade, urged adoption of a flood-control program as a means of insuring quick transfer of troops to the National Capital in cases of emergency.

He declared that in August, 1933, all direct routes from Fort Meade to Washington were blocked by flood waters from the Patuxent and the pumping station supplying water to the Army post was flooded.

Plans Are Outlined.

Plans envisioning a vast reservoir system, impounding the waters of the Patuxent to serve an area comprising practically all of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties and portions of Anne Arundel, Baltimore and Howard counties, were outlined by Harry R. Hall, chief engineer of the Washington-Suburban District in Hyattsville, Md.

Under the proposed system, water would be carried from the Patuxent to Upper Marlboro and Forrestville in Prince Georges County, Annapolis and the summer resorts along the Severn River in Anne Arundel County, Glen Burnie in Baltimore County, Elkridge in Howard County, Rockville in Montgomery County and all the towns within this semicircular area.

Everard E. Hatch, Mayor of Laurel, also cited possibility of using the Patuxent as a source of water supply. He said that any considerable increase in the population of Laurel would render the present source of supply—a small creek to the south of the municipality—insufficient to furnish the town's needs.

Flood Ravages Reported.

Reports on flood ravages also were made by Albert M. Tawney, civilian superintendent of the water works at Fort Meade, and Walter Lanahan, former Mayor of Laurel and a wealthy landowner.

The hearing was conducted by W. J. Matteson, district engineer for the War Department. It was held under authority of an act passed by Congress last year directing that data be assembled for a preliminary report on the necessity of adopting a program for harnessing the flood waters of the Patuxent River and its tributaries.

Hull Assailed, Called 'Great' In House Set-to

By the Associated Press.

A Republican assailed Secretary Hull as a "mystic and a dreamer" and a Democrat called him "this great man Hull" in a storm of House debate yesterday on a resolution to extend the reciprocity trade agreements act.

Representative Culkin (Republican), New York, said both Hull and Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, who handles details of trade agreement negotiations, "have a complete contempt for Congress."

Hull, he said, is "impatient and unmannerly under fire and seems to regard Congress as a log-rolling venal body, incapable of intelligent action."

Representative Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee, burst in to "challenge" the statement about a "distinguished Secretary of State who served 22 years in the House."

Then Representative Fuller (Democrat), Arkansas, took the floor to shout:

"This great man Hull has and will continue to make mistakes. But he is bringing back trade to this country."

Sayre sat in a gallery between two State Department aides, chatting and smiling during the exchange.

The legislation, slated for House passage early next week, would extend the trade agreements act, which expires June 12, for three years. Under the act the Administration can make pacts with foreign nations, cutting tariffs and other trade barriers without the consent of the Senate.

Earlier in the day Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier who headed the World War Industries Board, advised the House Military Committee that blanket embargoes in a permanent neutrality bill might injure the trade agreements program.

The United States, he said, should allow any one to purchase anything but munitions on a cash-and-carry basis.

Mayor Beasley said transfer of the system would be effected April 1 and that the city would retail Tennessee Valley Authority power from Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals, near here.

Today's announcement culminated a long series of negotiations since the power company, a Commonwealth & Southern subsidiary, offered to sell its Tuscumbia system for $120,000 last spring, the mayor's announcement said.

McGill Denies Landon Deal, to Stay in Senate

By the United Press.

Senator George McGill (Democrat), Kansas, denying reports of a political "deal" to head off possibility of former Gov. Alf M. Landon running for the Senate in 1938, said last night he had asked Attorney General Homer S. Cummings not to consider him for a vacant Federal judgeship.

McGill said he preferred remaining in the Senate and never considered taking the vacant judgeship. The rumored "deal" involved McGill's appointment to this post and the naming of Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering to his seat in the Senate.

New Clews in Trader Case May Lead to Another Arrest

Unnamed Man Figures in Secret Inquiry by Prosecutor.

By the Associated Press.

Snow Hill, Md., Feb. 4.—Investigators reported tonight they had uncovered new information that might lead to another arrest in the fatal shooting of Clarence J. Trader, Stockton utilities operator, whose widow was indicted on a murder charge.

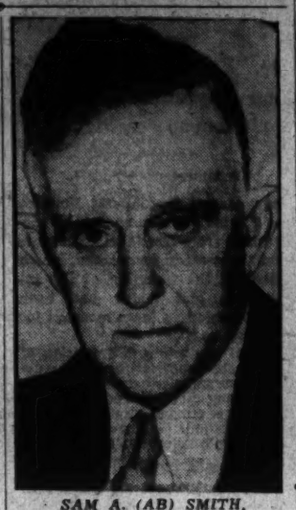
State's Attorney Thomas F. Johnson said Sheriff Ernest C. West, Deputies Crawford Hillman and Edwin Lynch and Constable William Hall, working out of town today, had turned up evidence that possibly might cause a second arrest in the case.

State police disclosed they also were following a "new lead." Neither Johnson nor the officers would say, however, what charge their suspect was sought on.

"We have always believed that someone else is connected in this case and we are working along those lines," said Sergt. Marlin Brubaker. "However, we don't know who he is.

"Patrolman J. J. Cassidy has been working on a new lead yesterday and today. I can't reveal where he is."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Jeannette Trader, whose wealthy estranged husband was found dead in her home January 14, remained in jail, awaiting arraignment on a murder charge tomorrow."



SAM A. (AB) SMITH, 63-year-old father of seven children, was questioned by police shortly before Mrs. Jeanette Trader was charged with the first-degree murder of her husband, Clarence J. Trader, Stockton utilities executive. Smith was named corespondent in a divorce suit filed by Trader.

Muscle Shoals Given $18,000 Loan by PWA

Muscle Shoals, Ala., Feb. 4 (AP). The town of Muscle Shoals received an $18,000 loan today from the Public Works Administration for construction of a municipal power system to use Tennessee Valley Authority electricity, Mayor W. H. Green announced.

Besides the loan, which was deposited in a bank to the town's credit, Mayor Green said that $1,250 of an approved $14,000 grant had beeen received. The distribution system, it was estimated will cost approximately $32,000.

Establishment of passenger and express service between Detroit and Indianapolis, via Fort Wayne, would serve public convenience and necessity, witnesses for the American Airways, Inc., testified at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing yesterday.

Applications of the American Airways to establish routes between Detroit and Indianapolis and between Detroit and Dayton have been contested by the Eastern Airlines Co.

Drought Check Being Framed By Roosevelt

President to Send Report on Midwest Problem to Congress.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt shaped a long-term drought program yesterday to dovetail with the vast public works and flood control plans he recently handed Congress.

Before him were detailed recommendations of Federal experts who have been seeking means to prevent future disasters like the 1934 and 1936 droughts on the Great Plains.

Mr. Roosevelt planned to send their report, along with a message of his own, to Congress shortly.

Administration planners who framed the report said it would take 20 to 25 years to carry out the program in the area which stretches from the Canadian border to Texas, east of the Rocky Mountains and west of the Mississippi.

The Federal Government would take the initiative, they said, by a careful survey of the 400,000,000 acres; by demonstration projects to conserve soil and water, and by funds to establish agriculture on a sound basis.

Formation of Federal-State policy boards to co-ordinate plans was suggested.

Wagner Commends Justice Crusade

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, appealed tonight, at a dinner in his honor at which some of the Nation's leading political figures joined to felicitate him, for a continuance of the "crusade for social justice" in America.

The dinner was arranged by the American Jewish Congress. On the committee were six members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet—Secretaries Ickes, Morgenthau, Swanson and Wallace, Postmaster General Farley and Attorney General Cummings.

The reception committee membership included Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York; Senator Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio; Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York; Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin; Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania; Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins; Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York; Representative O'Day (Democrat), New York, and Representative Fish (Republican), New York.

Under the new maritime law, shipowners may receive direct operating subsidies equal to the difference between American and foreign costs.

Heads of SEC Ask Ballinger To Resign Post

Conflict in Commission Is Traced to Report Made 13 Months Ago.

Resignation of Willis J. Ballinger, Securities and Exchange Commission chief of special studies, has been requested by the commission in the sequel to a bitter internal controversy of months duration within that group, it was learned last night.

Ballinger is known as an advocate of uncompromising Federal regulation of exchanges and markets. The report which Ballinger and Kemper Simpson, SEC economic adviser, submitted 13 months ago, recommending vigorous action by the commission to reorganize the security markets, was recalled upon word that his resignation had been asked.

It also was established last night the commission had considered also the abolition of Simpson's position, but had decided on his retention because of a study of margin trading on the exchanges which he is now conducting is regarded as worthy of continuation.

Ballinger's resignation is to be effective at a "reasonable time," probably in two months.

Informal comment among commission officials upon the action with regard to Ballinger was to the effect that a study of the problem of a Federal incorporation law upon which he is engaged is not believed needed. There appeared little doubt, however, that division within commission ranks resulted in the request for his resignation.

Registered as a Progressive since 1924, Ballinger has been friendly to the "brain trust" element within the New Deal, as also has been Chairman James M. Landis, who was said last night to have been among those voting for the requested resignation.

Traced to Report.

The differences within ranks of the commission were accentuated first by the Simpson-Ballinger report in December, 1935, calling for segregation of the functions of broker and dealer in security markets, a suggestion which brokers regarded as revolutionary.

Commission officials, on the other hand, denied there is any "liberal-conservative" split within their ranks, declaring Ballinger's report on segregation was unsatisfactory and that the issue is solely one of reorganizing the commission for efficiency.

Garey Removed As Police Head For Maryland

Nice Ousts Superintendent Once Under Fire; Post Goes to Munshower.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 4.—Maj. Enoch Barton Garey's hectic term as superintendent of State police came to an abrupt end today with Gov. Harry W. Nice's announcement he would replace him with Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, of Frederick.

The Governor ousted Garey on the ground he was "temperamentally unfitted" for the position. A burst of activity in the Legislature followed announcement of his decision to replace Garey with the 51-year-old Munshower.

Senator Milton L. Veasey, chairman of the committee on executive appointments, called his group into executive session. Its recommendation, and it was generally regarded as certain the committee favored Munshower, must go to the Senate for confirmation.

The House ways and means committee ordered an inquiry next week into the affairs of the State police department, summoning a number of witnesses, among them Garey and Munshower.

The Governor said that in removing Garey he was "in no sense of the word casting any reflections" upon his integrity. He said he had the "highest personal regard" for him and hoped to retain him in some other position.

Nice said he appointed Munshower because of his record in military affairs and public office and because he believed he would shun politics.

Munshower is a World War veteran and a National Guard officer now acting as head of the First Infantry. He was Mayor of Frederick from 1931 to 1934 and is in the electrical contracting business.

Gov. Nice announced Garey's ouster a day before the deadline for sending the Senate his list of appointments for confirmation. The Senate must approve Munshower's appointment before he takes office.

The charge of temperamental unfitness on which Nice ousted Garey was the same as that made by a committee investigating the death of a State trooper on a relief expedition Garey led across frozen Tangier Sound last winter. The committee had recommended his removal.

Sentiment against Maj. Garey ran high on Maryland's Eastern Shore last February after Sergt. Wilbert V. Hunter, of the State police, died of exposure on a relief expedition to ice-locked Tangier Island.

Maj. Garey, against the advice of veteran fishermen, led the relief party pulling three sled loads of food, out onto the ice in a raging blizzard. A group of fishermen who accompanied the party turned back when darkness overtook them and pleaded with Maj. Garey to accompany them. They said he told them they lacked courage and continued on. His party became lost and was not found by Coast Guardsmen until hours later.

Gov. Nice at that time appointed a nonpartisan investigating committee which, after lengthy hearings at Crisfield, reported that while Maj. Garey was personally courageous, he was temperamentally unsuited for his job. Gov. Nice set aside the committee's report.

Other witnesses summoned by the House ways and means committee for its hearing next week included Capt. Edward McK. Johnson and Lieut. Andrew Conner, of the State police.

Conner, the Senate finance committee was told last night, actually directs the force, while Johnson had been relegated to the position of "social contact man."

The testimony came from Johnson himself, appearing in place of Garey, and was regarded as one factor in prompting Nice's action.

Another factor, State House sources said, was the decision of the Traffic Safety Institute of Northwestern University not to establish a traffic safety bureau in Maryland because it considered the State police force inadequate.

Hearst Plea Granted On Seattle Newsmen

San Francisco, Feb. 4 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today granted William Randolph Hearst and five of his companies permission to appeal from an order of the National Labor Relations Board involving discharge of two Seattle Post-Intelligencer employes.

The court, however, denied Heart's petition for an injunction to restrain the board from instituting proceedings to enforce its order, which instructed the Seattle newspaper to reinstate Frank Lynch and Philip Armstrong, who were discharged last July. The court ordered the transcript of the proceedings before the board to be brought into court within 20 days.

Letters Decry Child Wedding; Bill Is Passed

Tennessee Senate Approves Marriage Ban for Persons Under 14.

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 4.—Voluminous mail protesting or deploring the recent marriage of a 9-year-old girl in the east Tennessee mountains was received today by Gov. Gordon Browning.

As the missives piled up in the Governor's office, the Senate approved and sent to the House a bill providing that all future marriages involving persons under 14 shall be "null and void." Any person could file a petition for annulment.

Gov. Browning, when asked if he approved the bill, replied, "absolutely."

Most of the letters to Browning were from women.

From a physician in Washington, D. C.: "I am ready at all times to defend Tennessee when attacked on account of our laws regarding evolution, but no sane man can possibly justify such a marriage as this one."

From a woman in Washington, D. C.: "We should send the missionaries to the rural districts of Tennessee instead of Africa."

Darrow Calls Laws Lax.

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Clarence S. Darrow, famed attorney, said tonight: "I feel, of course, that the laws of the State must be very lax to allow the marriage of a child whose own mother has said that that child has no knowledge of what the marriage relationship means. They must be strange parents.

"Surely, since this terrible example has come to light, the laws of the State of Tennessee will be changed to prevent recurrence of such a union."

Backus Pleads Innocent.

Watertown, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP).—Stanley Backus, the factory-hand husband of a 12-year-old girl, pleaded innocent today to a charge of second degree criminal attack involving alleged pre-marital relations with her.

Tonight, he was held in jail awaiting action.

Backus, a $26-a-week worker in an air brake factory, married the child, Leona Elizabeth Roshia, secretly at Carthage, N. Y., last January 15. The child wife, in custody of a children's agent, remained in a hospital. District Attorney Carl J. Hynes said she had told him she was pregnant.

At Albany, the State capital, legislators discussed proposals to tighten marriage laws.

Composer Completes Funeral March, Dies

Cleveland, Feb. 4 (AP).—Frank P. Russo, Cleveland band leader and composer who died Tuesday, spent the last months of his life completing his final composition—a funeral march for his own funeral.

Mike Lopez, who left Russo's band six years ago to become a funeral director, reported that two months ago the director gave his son, Al, the music and said "in case I die, this is the march I want you to play for me."

Doll-Age Brides Are Common In Maryland, Inquiry Shows

by the time they were in their eighteenth year, usually considered in most States as acceptable minimum age for matrimony, without parental consent.

It frequently has been claimed that the age of marriage has been moved up since the depression, that young people had to delay the ceremony until times improved. But this claim has not been borne out by the Maryland survey.

The most popular age for marriage, it can be seen from the table, is 18. From that year on there is a gradual decrease. Of those questioned, only 22 married at the age of 24, whereas 36 had been married at the age of 14.

The minimum age of marriage under Anglo-American common law, the commission pointed out, is 14 for boys and 12 for girls—the age at which Leona Roshia, the Watertown, N. Y., girl recently married Stanley Backus, 19.

The common law prevails in nine States, including Tennessee.

Thirty-nine States and the District of Columbia have enacted statutes regulating this subject, placing the ages higher. The minimum for boys in these States ranges from 15 in Missouri to 20 in New Hampshire. In 23 States it is 18.

The age for girls ranges from 14 to 18 in different States. In 20 States it is 16.

Fifteen States allow exceptions to the minimum age with judicial consent, and in most of these States boys as young as 14 may wed girls as young as 12. Virtually all States require the consent of parents to the marriage of any person under a specified "age of consent."

In nearly all States the specified age is 21 for boys and 18 for girls. That is true in the District of Columbia also.

Young Couple Gets License.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 4.—A marriage license was issued here today to Franz Albert Burgman, jr., 17, clerk, and Irene Virginia Thompson, 16, both of Woodland Beach, Md.

The two were acompanied by the girl's father, Joseph A. Thompson, of Woodland Beach, who gave his consent to the issuance of the license and also certified to the genuineness of a note directed to "whom it may concern," signed by Dorothy Allen Burgman and Franz A. Burgman, parents of the youth, and giving consent to the issuance of the license.

Under the Virginia law, consent of the girl's father is required in the issuance of a marriage license if she is under 21. No license can be issued for the marriage of a girl under 15 in Virginia.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the Washington String Quartet (Milton Schwartz, Jeno Sevely, substituting for Paul Brightenburg; George Wargo and Howard Mitchell), assisted by Francis Nash, pianist, in the Sulgrave Club Thursday afternoon. Program: Quartet in D minor (Ottorino Respighi), Pianoforte Quintet in F minor (Cesar Franck).

When death stopped the pen of Ottorino Respighi last year, the world lost a composer whose exceptional facility was, to a certain extent, inimical to his artistic immortality. He wrote so easily, with such an eclectic taste, that much of his music escaped that stamp of individuality which is impressed by a more deliberate cogitation. Only a genius can write to the swift dictation of inspiration and have his profile show in his writing. Even a talent as great as Respighi's weakens its perdurability by too fluent a manner of speech.

Stylistically, Respighi belonged to the pre-war school of esthetics, and almost to a coterie of that school. There are many parallels between his music and the poetry of Gabriele d'Annunzio. In the string quartet played yesterday one notes a hyper-refinement of sensibility, a preciousness of phrase, and hint of artificiality in the balanced strophes. One is charmed by the grace of the music, lulled by the cadences of its lyricism, intellectually delighted by its neatness of structure, but stimulated not at all by any authentic urgency.

One is tempted to call the difference between Respighi and Franck the opposition of dilettante and devotee, for there is a degree of truth in the comparison. Franck is so utterly unworldly, so lost to self in contemplation of the infinite, that his music has a seraphic purity. It bears the lineaments and speaks in his unmistakable accents, yet it comes to us like the intangible presence of a disembodied spirit.

Even in his impassioned moments, Franck has the serenity of a priest of beauty. It was not without reason that Alfred Bruneau called his works cathedrals in sound. A cathedral the D minor symphony seems to be, but the F minor quintet is a chapel in which one can feel less exalted by magnificence and more soothed by the benediction of peace. Yesterday's reading, with Miss Nash in an eloquent mood at the keyboard and the strings soaring in sympathy, was a deeply satisfying experience.

Rev. Oliver S. Baketel Dies in New Jersey

Maplewood, N. J., Feb. 4 (AP).—The Rev. Dr. Oliver Sherman Baketel, 88, said to have been the oldest active Methodist Episcopal clergyman in America, died today.

He had been librarian of the Methodist Episcopal Historical Society of New York since 1930.

Male Invasion Irks Graduates Of Mt. Holyoke

Dr. Woolley Leads Attack on Appointment of Dr. Ham as President.

nouncement that Mount Holyoke celebrates its centennial by departing from the ideal of leadership by women for women, which inspired the founding of the institution and which had been responsible in a large measure for its success."

"The protesting "Committee of 100"—all practical alumnae—asserted women all over the country have changed and will continue to change, their wills to ignore Mount Holyoke because of Dr. Ham's appointment.

Opposed by Dr. Woolley.

Dr. Woolley, in an address in Boston last night, subscribed to the belief of the alumnae committee that the group which selected Dr. Ham had been "packed."

The pamphlets put out by the "Committee of 100" headed "Tell it to the Marines," and clamoring for the appointment of a woman president of Mount Holyoke, charged that the nine trustees who selected the intellectual former marine had yielded to unacademic influences.

"To the extent of my knowledge," Dr. Woolley said, "the statements in the pamphlet are accurate, but they also suggest a trend which has been markedly unfortunate for women in European countries and in England."

"Although the women of America," continued Dr. Woolley, "have been somewhat more fortunate, nevertheless there are many instances even in this country today of 'fraternal' decisions to replace women by men. For the sake of other women, if not for one's own, neblesse oblige dictates that those evidences should be ignored."

Trustees Assailed.

The pamphlet issued by the aroused "Committee of 100" included the conclusions that the trustees who composed the committee of nine which selected Dr. Ham should resign; that clubs can withhold centennial and other funds until satisfaction is obtained and that "until the election of a new president, an acting president will be available from the administrative officers of the college."

The ladies who "finished" at Mount Holyoke have nothing against Mr. Ham—except that he is not a woman. In their pamphlet the alumnae generously describe "Mr. Ham's qualifications" as follows:

"Instructor at the University of Washington, instructor at the University of California, lieutenant and captain in thte Marine Corps during the war, an authority on English literature of the seventeenth century. At present associate professor at Yale. Lecturer at Albertus Magnus (a college of 113 students conducted by Dominican Sisters in New Haven)."

The aroused alumnae declared "it is not too late to act," and demanded that members of the committee of nine which selected Dr. Ham should resign. Althoug Dr. Ham now holds a legal contract, the ladies point out, he naturally, as a gentleman and an officer, would surrender it, if his sponsors resigned.

"Case a Moral One."

"The case is moral, not legal," said the Mount Holyoke ladies.

Miss (Dr.) Woolley said she wished it made plain her stand "involved a principle and not a prejudice."

No one holds anything against Dr. Ham—least of all the alumnae, it seems.

"I want to emphasize," added Dr. Woolley, "there is nothing personal in this situation, but that it is the great principle upon which this rests. My feeling is that so radical a change should not have been made without gaining the opinion of alumnae and faculty."

And everyone knows what chance Dr. Ham would have had if his appointment depended upon the alumnae and faculty—none of whom ever served in the marines.

Short Haul Alteration Viewed as Dangerous

By the Associated Press.

Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, chairman of the Inland Waterways Corporation, said yesterday that millions spent by the Government to develop inland waterways would go for naught if a proposed change in the interstate commerce act were made.

His statement was made at a hearing of the House Interstate Commerce Committee on the Pettengill bill to modify the "long-and-short-haul" clause of the act.

YES, SIR—the methods we follow in making Four Roses are mighty expensive. In fact, they cost us over half a million dollars a year more than other methods we could use.
But we're not changing. For it's the extra expense we go to that makes Four Roses what it is—that makes it, in our firm opinion, the finest whiskey you can buy, bar none.
For, you see, Four Roses is not just one fine whiskey. It is a glorious combination of several of the finest American straight whiskies (and only straight whiskies). Each of these whiskies is distilled by the costliest method known. Each must be outstanding for some particular virtue—aroma, body, smoothness, or flavor. Blended together our special way, these whiskies merge all these virtues in one magnificent liquor... Four Roses!
"But it costs me so little more to buy!"
"WHEN I first tasted Four Roses I said, 'Boy, if I could only afford a whiskey like this!' Then I heard the price—only a quarter more a pint than the brand I was buying. Believe me—I've stuck to Four Roses ever since!"

FOUR ROSES
A blend of straight whiskies—94 proof
We Believe Four Roses Is America's Finest Whiskey, Regardless of Age or Price
Frankfort Distilleries, Inc., Louisville and Baltimore, also make Paul Jones (92 proof), Old Oscar Pepper brand and Mattingly & Moore (both 90 proof)—all blends of straight whiskies.

Pall Mall Room To Lose Elkins For Few Weeks

Popular Dance King Will Return, However, Later in Current Season.

By Chanticleer.

Move fast, boys and girls, or you'll miss the last dance with Eddie Elkins. The "good luck" maestro leaves the Pall Mall room at the Raleigh this week and it will be several weeks before he gets back. Yessirree, he'll be back alright but it's a long time between drinks, as the old wheeze goes, and it will be a long time between Elkins dance numbers.

Kirk Alyn, of the dance team at the Pall Mall room currently, was seen here at the National in "Girl Crazy" and has played other shows—notably with Alice Brady. He's to make some musical comedy scenes in flickers before long.

Arthur Warren has arranged for some surprises at the Wardman Park Metronome room tomorrow afternoon when a series of tea dances begins. They will be of particular interest to college and university students on hand for it was at their suggestion that the teas were arranged. Maestro Warren and his men are working on some mighty tricky rhythms for this one.

Emory Daugherty, ye olde maestro, formerly at La Paree, is on view again—with a brand new band. The Cocoanut Grove is the place. Drop in and renew your acquaintanceship with him. On the floor bill are McCormick and Kidd, Helen Elly and Ray Beck. Come to think of it, Ray used to sing for Daugherty at La Paree. What a reunion.

Want to see the town's business men at luncheon? The Madrillon's the place—very popular with the b. m., just before the t. is added. Luncheon music by Ralon and trio; dinner music by Johnny Shaw and his Versatile Sextet, from 7 on. you may want to try the Snack Bar during the cocktail hour.

Speaking of rhythms, the eight Lenora coeds at the Lotus this week do a wide variety of things—the Harlem Rhythm, Dutch novelty and Gypsy something or other. Nancy Leeds gets a spotlight for her soft shoe acrobatic number and Vernon and Vanoff go to town with "Darktown Strutters Ball." Tanya Vanoff also bears down on a Russian number while the band plays "Dark Eyes."

Joan Alexander, new dancing comedienne at the Carlton's El Patio, likes traveling even more han dancing. The two go together very neatly, she says. For in her 21 years she has visited all the large cities of the country—and as far as Rio de Janiero.

Impromptu singing at the Hi-Hat seems to click with the customers. It seems everybody really does love to warble. Oscar Altman, major domo, is the scarer-upper and leads the songsters to the mike. High spot of this week was when a party rated one of its members to sing the oldest number he could recall. Turned out to be "Casey Jones."

Item on something you probably don't know: Maestro Sascha Bartlovsky, of the Troika, is in charge of some music work for the United States Government. It seems he translates song lyrics and provides parts of songs that may be missing.

Jack Campbell and Leo Lisee are in full swing at the Mayfair these days and Jimmy Byrd, your host there, says the motto now is "dine, drink and be merry." The food and bar speak for themselves most eloquently, he 'lows, and who could fail to be merry with such entertainers as Jack and Leo!

It was a lot of fun at the Dude Ranch Wednesday night when another barn dance was spotlighted. Next special attraction is Sunday night (admission by card only) when things go informal with the audience providing part of the show. The regular floor show is staged at midnight to Berk Motley's orchestrations.

Dmitri, Karel and Andre, satirists of the dance appearing on the billing in the Shoreham ballroom this week, are amusing guests with subtle exaggerations of the current dance themes. In contrast, is the sincerity of Leonidoff's singing, everything from European favorites to our Western cowboy songs. Irma Lane is seen in solo dances and Kaye Kernan sings with Barnee and the orchestra.

The sublime goes to the ultra-sublime at La Paree this week, say the people, when the six lovelies in the chorus tap their way to the strains of the "Poet and Peasant" overture. And the Harpers present a vibrant American bolero, and Betty and Buddy Harmon, the Flying Wheels present a new twist to roller skating. Enette Frank is on hand too in a military dance number.

Four of Washington's after-dark-eries will send entertainers to the Earle this Saturday night for the midnight benefit show—beginning at 11:30. They are the Shoreham, the Madrillon, Cocoanut Grove and Russian Troika. All proceeds will go to the Red Cross. Naturally, these artists' appearance at the Earle will not interfere with scheduled appearances on their own floors.

Fireman Dies Protecting Pay Train From Bandits

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Feb. 4 (AP). A bandit foray on a $100,000 United Fruit Co. pay train cost the life of the train's fireman and left the engineer and several others seriously wounded, reports from Progreso disclosed today.

The train crew, however, drove off the bandits before they could reach the money, comprising a pay roll for banana workers.

The bandits had derailed the train by pulling the rails up. The attack occurred yesterday.

Senate to Begin Hearing On Capitol Extension

The Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds this morning will begin a public hearing on the Connally bill to extend the east front of the Capitol at an estimated cost of $4,000,000.

Among the first witnesses will be Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, and H. P. Caemmere, secretary.

The bill passed the Senate last session, but was blocked in the House.

On the Night Club Floors This Week

Presenting above, Countess Loney, familiar personality to all Maryland Club Gardens patrons. And next door, Tanya Vanoff, of the dancing Vernon and Vanoff team at the Lotus.

On the Air Today

The mails are full of program preference polls these days—but the results are usually the same. Jack Benny, Fred Allen and Rudy Vallee are the consistent top-rankers in the general program field; the "Sunday Evening Hour," G. M. Concerts and New York Philharmonic are in a class to themselves in the music classification and Edwin C. Hill and Boake Carter lead the field of commentators.

The most notable exception is in the dance orchestra division. One poll, that of the Motion Picture Daily, produced Andre Kostelanetz as the best dance band maestro. Others give the laurels hands down to Lombardo. Wayne King is the consistent runner-up.

Kostelanetz first came into prominence as a concert conductor. His dance work is entirely secondary. In fact, program men in the Columbia offices in New York do not now consider him a dance-music leader and it would seem that Kostelanetz himself accepted the honors conferred on him with his fingers crossed.

Further, it is curious to note that the sponsors of the program which brought Kostelanetz to the fore as a director of rhythm replaced him with Hal Kemp a few weeks ago—and Kemp's name has never figured in the polls.

In the "male vocalist" division, Crosby and Eddy are tops with Kenny Baker, Frank Parker and Lanny Ross alternating in seconds and thirds.

In drama, the "Radio Theater" is unrivaled as first selection with "One Man's Family" consistently named second. "Bambi" received one first but the manner in which the division was set up evidently differed from other polls.

It seems to be more difficult to find one outstanding choice in the feminine vocalists ranks. Kate Smith, Jessica Dragonette and Frances Langford all have lead polls since the first of the year. Gertrude Niesen, Lily Pons and Kay Thompson hold the second and third places.

Virginia Births Decline, Deaths Increase in '36

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 4.—Deaths in Virginia last year exceeded those of any other year since 1918, while births declined to the lowest figure since records were started in 1913, the Bureau of Vital Statistics reported today.

The records showed 32,036 deaths during 1936 compared with 30,198 in 1935, although the total was 9,236 under the record 41,272 of 1918.

Only 1918 and 1916 have shown a higher death total since vital statistics records were begun. The 1916 total was 32,144.

The bureau noted a "consistent increase" in degenerative diseases, such as cerebral hemorrhage, heart disease and nephritis and cancer.

A marked increase was reported in influenza and pneumonia during the months of March, April and November, and sharp increases in dysentery and diarrhea during September, October and November with five times the number of deaths from these diseases in October, 1936, as in October, 1935.

The new low record in births was 49,975 compared with 50,358 in 1935 and 52,198 in 1934.

The 1936 births were more than 21,800 under 1921, the highest year on record when 71,784 were recorded.

The average number of births for the five years ended in 1936 was only 51,847 compared with 67,597 for the five years ended with 1924, or a decline of 15,750.

The bureau pointed out the 1936 figures did not include delayed reports, but comparisons with 1935 used figures for the corresponding period of that year.

Norwegian Maid, Heir to $600,000, Goes to New York

West Englewood, N. J., Feb. 4 (AP). Overjoyed by the news she was heiress to a $600,000 fortune, 18-year-old Lillian Ellison, "Cinderella of the Washtubs," dressed in her prettiest today and went to New York.

For part of the day, at least, she was relieved of the onerous duty of peeling potatoes and onions and her other domestic chores in the home of Mrs. Herbert L. Wedye.

What she was going to do in New York, whom she was going to see, and other details of her trip, she kept secret. Nor would she say defintiely whether she was quitting her job now.

The blonde little immigrant girl inherited the money from her father in Norway, whose home she left last year to seek her "fortune" in the United States.

In the same message that told of her father's death came word that her stepmother also had died, reputedly heartbroken because no share had been left to her.

Press Club Group To Meet Brazliians

Journalists of the United States and Brazil will exchange greetings at a reception to be given in honor of Jose Carlos De Macedo Soares, former minister of foreign affairs of Brazil and special ambassador to the United States on a good will mission, at the National Press Club at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Charles O. Gridley, club president, will receive from the Brazilian emissary the greetings of Brazilian journalists in the form of a letter from Herbert Moses, president of the Brazilian Press Association.

Gridley, after a brief address of welcome, will present to Ambassador Macedo Soares a decorative scroll conveying to Brazilian newspapermen expressions of good will from American journalists.

The reception will be attended by officials of the Pan-American Union, club members and a number of others interested in Pan American affairs.

Young Democrats Plan Victory Dinner Mar. 4

The Young Democratic Clubs of the District of Columbia will stage a Victory Dinner in honor of President Roosevelt on the night of March 4 at the Willard Hotel, John Sembower, chairman of the central young Democratic committee announced last night.

The dinner is to be part of the Nation-wide celebration similar to the Jackson Day dinners of last year, the purpose being to erase the $450,000 National Democratic Committee debt.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Bridge Economy.

The habits of a lifetime are hard to break. In the old-style economy on which most of us were brought up, you had to struggle for everything and hold on to what you had already amassed. What bridge players need is a New Deal philosophy which would rephrase in terms of bridge the motto "You have to spend money to make money." Certainly West, in the hand below, would have done bette with such a slogan to guide her.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ J 7 ♡ A 6 3 2 ◇ A 9 7 5 ♣ J 7 4
♠ A Q 10 9 ♡ Q J 10 ◇ K 10 3 ♣ K 8 5	North West East South	♠ 8 5 2 ♡ 9 8 7 4 ◇ Q J 6 4 2 ♣ 3
	♠ K 6 4 3 ♡ K 5 ◇ 8 ♣ A Q 10 9 6 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♣	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

After West's overcall of one spade North felt justified in shading the trump requirements for a raise. With two Aces he had to take some action, and the raise was the best bid at his command. South's rebid on a rather skimpy hand was based on the assumption that North's raise solidified the trump suit. In that event there would be six club tricks as a nucleus for the notrump game. With an honor in every suit and with no reason to prefer clubs to notrump, North naturally raised to game.

West opened the Queen of hearts, dummy winning with the Ace. The club finesse was taken and lost to West's King. Declarer took the heart return with his King and ran all of his clubs.

In order to relieve West from a possibly embarrassing guess, East signaled diamond strength by discarding first the six and then the deuce of diamonds. But West's habits were due to nullify the effect of this signal.

Declarer had saved as his last five cards the four spades and a diamond. West had the Ace-Queen of spades, the ten of hearts and the King-ten of diamonds. When South led a diamond to dummy's Ace West gleefully played the ten since it was sufficient to drive out dummy's Ace. But then a heart return put West on lead with no choice but to take her high cards and surrender a spade trick to South.

Had West not been so concerned with preserving the King of diamonds, she could have defeated the contract. By playing the King of diamonds on declarer's diamond lead, she would have retained a card of exit after the heart throw-in. East would have been able to win this diamond and lead a spade through declarer.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Feb. 4.

ONE of the historic fiction plots is the one about the young understudy who leaps on the stage when the star is taken tired and gives such a blistering performance that in the next chapter she is a star herself, and practically humpbacked from the weight of pearls and diamonds.

ALICE HUGHES.

That's fine for the novel or the movie, but it happens darned seldom here in our great cluster of theaters. I've known a lot of understudies personally. Some are washed-up girls looking for any kind of a dinky job. Mostly, however, they are youngsters making their first try at the stage. They almost never get a break, for stars are a tough and sturdy race. Mostly they sit around back stage, knitting or playing solitaire, for, like a cop or a fireman, they must be always on call. Semi-occasionally, it comes. This year, for instance, pretty Helen Walpole had gone on a few times for Margaret Sullavan in "Stage Door." But imagine anybody playing old Vicky in "Victoria Regina" when Helen Hayes is sick! The show just closes until Helen recovers, that's all.

• • • •

But the girls burn to act, and why not? So Peggy Bancroft of "White Horse Inn" has just organized "The Understudies' Club," 36 strong, to get their lights out from under a bushel. These pretty and ambitious lassies, many of them talented, are going to give a show on a Sunday night just to show managers, booking agents and other theatrical head men that they can really act when turned loose—and they hope that something beside understudy jobs will result. And believe me, I hope so, too!

I've met a lot of sad people, but none sadder than an understudy—an actress with no chance to act! Imagine a pianist with no arms, or a blind painter, and you can understand the girls' spiritual agonies!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I've often thought, as I have hung around the fringe of our swell church weddings, that they've become too trite and patterned. Same old technique and stunts. Now I have hope, since the wedding of Anne Bigelow Rosen and Janos Scholz at St. George's in Stuyvesant Square. Listen—printed musical programs for guests, a vested choir and six trumpeters preceding the bridal party down the aisle, and spotlights on the bride and bridegroom before the altar! Boy, were THOSE a set of nuptials! David Belasco would have loved it! . . .

• • • •

How is your crop of Shirley Temples this year? Ours is booming right along, thanks. Every pretty little thing with curls and dimples is speaking her pieces without too much prodding from fond mama. One of our leading candidates is 5-year-old Mary Frances Bowdren, of the Bronx, who fills all the specifications. She sings, recites and dances. Of course, she hasn't a contract yet. But have any of your local Shirley Temples? . . .

• • • •

One of our luscious blonde subdebs of great local fame is the peaches-and-cream child called Honey Johnson. How the newspaper cameramen love her! Now she is reported to be engaged to a handsome English youth named Stephan Rafael—and the weeping photographers are scurrying about lining up new Dream Girls . . .

• • • •

One of the handsomest and richest widows in our town is Mrs. Herbert Shipman, whose husband was a suffragan bishop of the local Episcopal diocese. She has a swank duplex overlooking the East River, travels everywhere, and figures largely in the social scene . . .

• • • •

And then I note, in the next breath that social-work sharks have figured out a food budget, for a sick mother and three small kidlets here, of $17.40 per month. It doesn't seem possible, but that's it! Wouldn't pay a Park avenue butter-bill! Is it any wonder that this daffy place is a volcano with a very thin and trembling crust over the crater?

Red Lace Makes Style Debut

A "red" revolution is on in the fashion world. In defiance of the recent vogue for black, mid-season gowns for both daytime and evening are appearing in brilliant colors, red being a favorite. The evening gown above, noted for chic simplicity, is of bright red lace with hem trimming and peplum effect sash of red velvet. This sleek and sophisticated model from Jenny depicts the new length in evening gowns as decreed by French designers, Americans preferring the floor-length type. The high-in-front and backless decolletage is also a typical Parisian idea.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Complications of Diabetes.

Diabetes is a disease which everyone can understand. It may be likened to an incoming tide in which the level of sugar in the blood rises so high that it spills over and flows away via the urine. It is not necessary that patients consume sugar in order to supply the blood with this substance. All starchy materials, such as bread and potatoes, are changed into sugar in the process of digestion. The reason that diabetes develops is because the individual is unable to burn up the sugar in his own body. Hence it accumulates and in its train there follows a long series of abnormal symptoms. Poisonous acids are formed and the resistance of the body is lowered markedly.

May Change Habits.

Physicians recognize that the patient's general health has a decided effect upon the "sugar disease." Habits may require methodical rearrangement, especially as to meals, injections of insulin, exercise and rest. While the victim need not regard himself as an invalid, he should secure more than the average amount of rest and avoid worry and all mental and physical strain. Exercise, of course, is needed, but it must stop short of fatigue.

Of prime importance is cleanliness of the skin, which should be kept as free from bacteria as possible. The teeth should be attended to regularly and every minor infection called to the physician's attention. Special care of the feet is required, particularly among elderly diabetics, as gangrene, due to loss of circulation, may bring on a disabling complication. Even a hot-water bottle may be responsible for a slight burn, with ensuing gangrene.

As every patient knows, more than ordinary care should be taken to keep away from those who suffer from colds, influenza, sore throat, etc. In the presence of one of these acute flareups the treatment of the original disease becomes much more difficult and the whole situation is fraught with unpleasant possibilities.

While insulin has proved of inestimable value and while some additions to our therapy have been made in a recent modification (protamine insulinate), nevertheless the complications of diabetes, namely, infections or gangrene, continue to appear.

Should Obey Doctor.

For safety's sake every diabetic should take an oath of obedience to his physician. He must be visited sufficiently often to make sure that the disease is under accurate control. In establishing a program of diet and insulin, the blood sugar should be checked at various times during the day until the diet has been so carefully worked out that no rise will occur without the patient's knowledge. There are many instances in which the blood will be normal before breakfast and yet the urine becomes loaded with sugar later in the day.

By Alice Brooks.

WHAT MATTER if you've no real flowers for your room when these shaded lilac clusters so ably take their place! See how effectively the motif centers on your spread! The bolster's more decorative too, for that extra cluster and the butterflies that you could also use on matching scarfs. You'll love embroidering the lilacs in lazy-daisy stitch and French knots in outline, running and single stitch completing the motif. Two shades of lavender with a touch of yellow set off by green leaves and you have a lovely decoration. In Pattern 5786 you will find a transfer pattern of one large spray 19½x22¾ inches; one and one reverse butterfly 3½x4¾ inches; one spray 5¼x6 inches and two butterflies 2x3¼ inches; color suggestions; illustrations of all stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Piano Lesson Teaches Child To Use Hands

Exact, Independent Play of Fingers Benefits in Later Life.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

LEARNING to play the piano is beneficial to a child in more ways than one. Primarily, of course, the object of music lessons is to teach the child a means of expression. He may never play well, but so long as he is able to give himself pleasure, he has benefited by the lessons.

He has gained something else, however, which is too rarely considered in teaching a child to play, and that is exact and independent use of his hands and fingers. This in itself is worth the expenditure of time and money on teaching him to play a manual or stringed instrument of any kind. The organ, the violin family, the banjo, guitar or harp, and especially the piano, all train the hands and fingers.

Such training is of inestimable value to anyone, and is not always easy to get in the ordinary occupations of a world where machinery plays an overwhelming part. Weaving, spinning, wood carving, even sewing and carpentry, have largely been forgotten.

A child can grow up scarcely using his hands and fingers except to push buttons and shift gears. He is unconscious of his separate fingers or that his hands are independent one from the other.

One of the few means of training hands which we still make use of is the musical instrument. If every child learned control, accuracy and speed on some instrument which is played by hand, whether he learned it through jazz or Bach, he would have gained a valuable training for the future.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

When Husband, After Two Years, Seems Bored With Wife's Affection, What Should She Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What can be done about an otherwise perfect husband when he becomes bored? I submit this problem to you because I don't care to discuss it with those who know me. My husband is a fairly well-paid mechanic; craves action; is generally good humored, a man of slightly better-than-average mind and true to his marriage vows. Also, he is a very affectionate person and a real family man, but sometimes he appears slightly bored when I "fuss" over him. Occasionally he is given to fits of temper and sulks, apparently over nothing. Yet there must be some reason.

• • • •

We have been married over two years and I suppose our marriage has arrived at the "let-down" stage. I've been too busy and too engrossed in my several hobbies to notice this before. He loves me, I am sure. For a long time he was what is described as "crazy" about me and he is not fickle. Perhaps he values me more because I was hard to get.

• • • •

For two years before we became engaged I rejected his suit. But he persisted and finally won. I suspect his victory was too complete and that he still craves the thrill of the chase, but how shall I go about providing that thrill? What must I do to recapture the happiness of our pal-sweetheart days? How can I help him over the rough places in his disposition?

I read your column every day and appreciate your keen discernment and delightful literary style; likewise your ability to give those who need it a plain talking to. If that is what I need, go ahead. And thank you for whatever help you can give me. Sincerely yours,

AMBITIOUS WIFE.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR AMBITIOUS WIFE: I wonder if the whole trouble here isn't a result of your having fallen into the proverbial error of "taking your husband for granted;" of assuming he could never be fickle (even in fancy); in believing it would never be necessary (since he was always so 'crazy' about you) to retain some special fastidiousness and coquetry in your relationship with him.

When an otherwise perfect husband becomes bored with his wife's demonstrations of affection the time is overripe for her to take scrupulous inventory of herself and their relationship. Exercising the utmost tact and subtlety, she should take steps to restore the delicate balance which existed in courtship and early marriage days, when he was the lover and she the beloved.

• • • •

It may be you have given too much time and thought to your hobbies, so that in a psychic sense you have neglected your husband by denying him a special kind of awareness. You may have expected lovemaking to introduce itself as a matter of course throughout marriage, without invoking it in such truly feminine ways as charming attentiveness in conversation; fastidious grooming and becoming variety in dress; an unfailing modesty in transacting your toilette; a certain delicacy of speech and action in every situation; and, above all, a readiness for lovemaking which waits upon your husband's invitation.

• • • •

A woman who brings a sweet dignity, instinctive modesty (not to be confused with prudery), and an agreeable margin of emotional reserve (which dissolves only in the warmth of her husband's tenderness) to marriage will not—indeed, cannot—bore her husband by "fussing" over him at ill-chosen moments. It is just possible your husband's romantic concept of you has faded entirely, as the result of your failure to understand and live up to whatever may have been his ideal image of you. He may be emotionally intrigued by some other woman at the moment, while remaining—and intending to remain—technically faithful to his marriage vows. Or he may be contrasting you unfavorably with a romantic ideal which exists only in his imagination.

• • • •

You have already taken one remedial step, by becoming aware of the indefinable change in your husband's attitude. The next step should be in the direction of recapturing his romantic fancy. Think back and try to recall those ways and moods which pleased him most in the earlier months of your association. Don't let the fear of seeming ridiculous keep you from attempting, even now, to restore some newness, some strangeness, some elusiveness, to your personality; and some formality to your domestic setup. Your husband may laugh and tease, but, unless I am much mistaken, he will greatly approve.

Dinner Entertainment Is Given in Flower-Decked Dining Room.

The Ambassador of Spain and Senora de los Rios were guests of honor last evening at a dinner at which the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito entertained at the Embassy. Also among the guests was Viscount Hidemaro Konoye, distinguished Japanese statesman and musician, who Tuesday night was guest conductor at the concert of the Philadelphia Symphony and later guest of honor at a reception at the Embassy.

Yellow daffodils and Japanese iris formed the centerpiece for the table at which the 34 guests were seated. In other rooms lavender and white tulips, deep red carnations, white carnations and deep red roses were used. There also were the two Japanese gardens recently made for Mme. Saito by Mrs. Herbert H. Greger, who studied flower arrangement in Japan. One was in the large salon and one in the small salon.

Both gardens were in large green bowls.

A rock had been placed in the center of each and covered with moss. Smaller rocks were arranged to resemble protruding ledges on a mountainside and the water in the bowls, was absorbed by the moss and gave the appearance of waterfalls. Miniature cut flowers were placed so they appeared to be growing on the mossy hillside.

The dinner guests in addition to the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios, included the Canadian Minister and Lady Marle and Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban; the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Wilbur J. Carr; the Air and Military Attache of the German Embassy and Frau von Boetticher; Viscount Konoye; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Britten, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Dooman, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn, Senorita Laura de los Rios, daughter of the Spanish Ambassador, Col. and Mrs. Ralph H. Hallett, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll H. Kenworthy, the Military Attache of the Japanese Embassy, Col. Masashika Hirota; the Second Secretary and Mme. Okazaki, the Assistant Naval Attache Lieut. Comdr. Tsereo Shiki and Mr. Jiro Takase, secretary to the Ambassador.

Guest Soloist, String Quartet Offer Concert

Lieut. Col. Watson's Wife Plays Piano With Capital Group.

A pleasant interlude in the rush of social events yesterday was the concert of the Washington String Quartet at 5 o'clock in the ballroom of the Sulgrave Club. Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, wife of Lieut. Col. Watson, aide to the President, was guest soloist in the Cesar Franck Juintet in F minor.

Mrs. Watson (professionally, Frances Nash) has played with the National Symphony Orchestra and is widely known as a concert artist. Many friends were present yesterday. She presented a lovely picture as well as beautiful music, as she sat at the piano, the dark blue of her dress corresponding with the dark suits of members of the quartet and contrasting with the light tone of the ivory walls and the peach-colored draperies at the long windows of the room. She had a powder-blue scarf at the neck of her frock, a belt of the same color and her golden hair was rolled in a halo effect around her head.

Members of the quartet were Mr. Milton Schwartz, first violin; Mr. Jeno Seveley, second violin, substituting for Mr. Paul Brightenburg; Mr. George Wargo, viola, and Mr. Howard Mitchell, cello.

Mrs. Oliver Strunk and Mrs. Reeve Lewis were at the door taking tickets, and Mrs. Strunk carried up the bouquets of orchids and roses which had been sent to Mrs. Watson to present to her at the close of the program.

Among the patronesses for the series of concerts by the quartet who attended yesterday's musicale were Mrs. Paul Bastedo, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. Carl A. Droop, Mrs. Emory Scottland, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Miss Mary Winslow and Miss Harriet Winslow, Mrs. Henry Leonard and Mr. Henry Blakeston Wilkins.

The next concert by the quartet, members of which are all from the National Symphony, will be on February 25.

Mrs. Leiter Is Hostess To Visitation Alumnae

For the past three years, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, president of the Georgetown Visitation Convent Alumnae Association, has opened her home for a program for the benefit of the alumnae association fund. Last year Frances Nash presented a musicale and yesterday the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh lectured on the subject, "Democracy's Reply to Communism." The lecture at Mrs. Leiter's home on Dupont Circle was followed by a tea.

Many members of society were in the audience. Mrs. Leiter, wearing a black silk frock with an organdy flower at the bodice and a corsage of orchids at the waist, greeted her friends as they arrived. Miss Nancy Ordway, a graduate of the convent, took the cards of admission at the door. She wore a green wool frock topped by a mink cape and a small green hat trimmed with the same fur.

Mink coats seemed to predominate among those worn by the guests. Miss Audrey Campbell wore with hers a tiny off-the-face hat with mink trimming. Mrs. Sims Snow wore with her long mink coat a black hat with a tiny veil.

Tea was served in the dining room and the long table had a centerpiece of jonquils, iris and snapdragons, flanked by silver candelabra. Miss Christabel Hill, Mrs. Leiter's secretary, helped see that the guests were served, and members of the graduating class of the convent, dressed in caps and gowns, assisted in ushering.

Among those present were Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, whose small pillbox hat of black caracul matched her coat; Miss Eleanor Roosevelt in a black coat trimmed with fox and a small hat with black coq feathers, Mrs. Sherman Miles in a three-quarter length coat of wool, Mrs. Thomas Riggs, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. William Fisher, Miss Suzanne Kappler, Baron Paul Schell, of the Hungarian Legation; Mrs. Lawrence Townsend in a brown coat trimmed with mink, Miss Dorothy Tirrell in black with a velvet beret, Mr. Donald Downs, Mr. Pendleton Hogan, the writer; Mrs. Frank Savage and Mrs. Archibald Davis.

Mrs. Leiter will sail February 12 for a stay in Nassau. Miss Nancy Leiter, her daughter, returned yesterday from a stay in Aiken, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. J. Becker and Miss Doris Becker, formerly of Atlanta, have moved from 2101 Connecticut avenue to their new home at 1810 Twenty-fourth street.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt Open White House To Brilliant Assembly at Evening Entertainment

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, Attends in White Crepe Gown; Acting Postmaster General and Wife Among Guests.

By Lynda Reeve.

Last evening the brilliant lights of the White House shone out as the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were receiving heads of the various departments of the Government and their assistants at the fourth large evening party of the season.

The guests arrived with the promptness peculiar to White House affairs. The ladies were escorted from the top of the long stairway to the East Room by the military and naval aides while their husbands and escorts followed.

Among the first to arrive were the Director of the Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, in white crepe made on simple lines, the skirt terminating in a slight train; Mr. Bradford Ross, Mrs. Edness Wilkins, wearing pearl satin fashioned with a fitted bodice and full-flaring skirt, with a cluster of fuchsia velvet flowers at the neck; and the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Ernest Draper, she in gray satin with a flame-colored sash.

There was the usual little breathless hush—the scarlet-coated Marine Band striking up "Hail to the Chief" and the "four horsemen" led the President and his procession into the red room, and on into the blue room. Mrs. Roosevelt was gowned in gold lame with a gracefully draped scarf of cream rare old lace caught at the front by a large brooch of rubies and pearls.

In the procession the Secretary of State was accompanied by Mrs. Hull, costumed in black starched net threaded with gold; Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, were "widows for the evening," their husbands being detained at home and office by demanding duties. Mrs. Cummings was wearing a gown of black crepe fashioned with a cowl neckline lined with Nile green, and on one shoulder was a spray of leopard orchids. Mrs. Swanson's gown was of a very becoming shade of wine velvet. The Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold Ickes, and the Secretary of War, Mr. Harry Woodring, walked together, followed by the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace, she is gleaming white satin; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, she in Persian blocked lame of deep blue and silver with touches of red; the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, in black crepe, the bodice of which was stitched in gold, and bringing up the rear of the line, the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Roswell Magill; she was wearing a period gown of scarlet velvet fashioned with a very full skirt and puffed sleeves embroidered in gold.

Since this was the "departmental" reception, the Cabinet members, instead of taking their usual places in the red room to chat and receive their friends, continued on into the green room and were the first to go down the line, thus leading their departments.

Gen. Hines Attends.

Gen. and Mrs. Frank Hines were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. James H. Moyle, the latter attired in black lace. The Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. William W. Howes had with them their young daughter, Miss Mary Senate Howes. Mrs. Howes was costumed in Burgundy lace made with a fitted bodice, finished at the neck with a flaring cape-collar, and a full skirt. Miss Howes had on a gown of pale blue net, the skin of which was beaded with gold in a delicate design. After going through the receiving line, the Cabinet daughter waited near the diningroom door for her close friend of school and debut days, Miss Katherine Friant, who was with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Friant. She had on an unusual gown of black broadcloth made on empire lines with the square neckline set off by two topaz clips. Mrs. Friant was attired in rust velvet trimmed with chartreuse.

A few of those seen gathered before the long buffet table with its six large punch bowls, included Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Burke, she in soft blue crepe designed with a pleated ruffle around the bottom, and a corsage of scarlet roses on one shoulder; their daughter, Miss Mary Virginia Burke who had on a frock of black chiffon studded with rhinestones and Mr. William Burke; the Postmaster of Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. Alexander Graham, she in white chiffon printed with an unusual black pattern; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse M. Donaldson, the latter in bronze lace, Miss Dorin Donaldson, wearing black moire, and Mrs. O. V. Mast, another visitor here from Kansas City.

Lois Young Present.

Others standing about in nearby groups were Mr. and Mrs. James M. Cole, she in black net designed with brief sleeves, full skirt and rhinestone trimming; their niece, Miss Lois Young, in rose taffeta, made on bouffant lines, with bands of violet velvet around the hemline, neck and puffed sleeves; Commissioner and Mrs. Guy T. Helvering, she in black crepe made with a ripple cape and trimmed with bands of brilliants; Mr. Charles Koester; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Carter, the latter in black velvet, the high neck caught in the front by a spray of gardenias; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Klotz, she in a black net frock with narrow straps over the shoulders and slim bands of satin in the full skirt; the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche, who was wearing a gown of turquoise blue velvet; Miss Nell Chauncy, costumed in delicate peach-tinted satin; Col. and Mrs. Philip Murphy, the latter wearing a becoming gown of white satin designed on simple lines; the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Theodore Walters, she in sapphire blue chiffon and lace; Mr. and Mrs. John W. Finch, she wearing powder blue crepe sprinkled with brilliants; Mr. and Mrs. John C. Page, the latter in peach chiffon; Mr. John W. Studebaker, who was accompanied by his son, Mr. Gordon Studebaker, and Mr. James Alley.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

The George S. Pattons are due back from their tour of duty in Hawaii and we are wondering whether or not they will sail the return trip in their boat.

Their many friends made while stationed at Fort Myer had hoped that they would again be stationed here, but this time they go to Fort Riley.

While out in the tropical paradise, Mrs. Patton, by no means spent her time sunning on the beach and being lazy. No, indeed—hours she spent in research and then writing, all of which is plainly and easily seen in her book, "Blood of the Shark," just published.

If many more Washington people write books, New York and its colony of artists and writers may be lost in the shuffle, completely outdistanced by our own group.

Mrs. Burke, lovely dark-eyed Spanish wife of handsome Tom Burke, of the Department of Commerce, took just exactly one-half hour yesterday to make up her mind, fasten the loose domestic strings about the house, pack her bag and be off with her husband for a flying trip to New York.

• • • •

Saw Mrs. Clinton B. Eilenberger, who with her husband, the Third Assistant Postmaster General, makes her home at the Raleigh, out for a brisk walk the other afternoon. A playful wind whirled around a corner and she burrowed her face deeper into the broadtail collar of her coat.

• • • •

The Laurence Rubels are almost settled in their new home. It is way out on Seventeenth street and far from the noise and bustle of the work-a-day world. After living in a residence that had the usual number of windows to be supplied with curtains and draperies, the tiny lady of the house found herself with just exactly ten times as many paned openings to be dressed. As Ruth Baer—one of the very first visitors—says, it is a house of sunlight.

• • • •

Lovely titan-haired Ruth Alden Reed is one person who gets out early and, despite the winds that blow, sallies forth afoot to tend to her business. Yesterday she had on a green suit with a brown sweater, at the neck of which was a gold bead necklace.

• • • •

Polly Robinson has one evening frock in particular that causes quite a stir whenever she goes traveling with it. It is a gorgeous full-skirted ruffley affair and each time Polly starts out for a college prom she has to cart the gown back to the shop where she bought it and have them pack it specially in a huge box with layers of tissue paper. The funny part of it is that invariably the dress, being tagged, checked and sent on its own, arrives way ahead of its wearer, and no one seems to know just what it is or what to do with it before she gets there.

Mr. and Mrs. King Plan Tea to Honor Visitor

Mr. Samuel Wilder King, Delegate of Hawaii, and Mrs. King have issued invitations for a tea on Sunday from 5 to 7 o'clock at their apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel, in honor of Baroness Zur Helle, of Honolulu.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Young will entertain at a reception tomorrow evening in their home on Western avenue in honor of their son, Mr. Maury Young, and Miss Isabel Aronsen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Aronsen, of Toledo, Ohio.

Refugee Relief Total Reaches $14,119,000

Rolling ahead as irresistably as the swollen waters of the Mississippi, contributions to the Red Cross flood relief fund totaled $14,119,000 throughout the Nation yesterday.

Large contributions for the succor of those made homeless and hungry in the devastated Ohio Valley and the threatened Mississippi Valley, included the Guaranty Trust Co., of New York, which sent $10,000; the Singer Manufacturing Co., $5,000; Thomas W. Lamont, $2,500; Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, $2,500, and the William Wrigley Co., $2,000.

Two privates in the Marine Corps at Quantico sent funds to the Red Cross because they had seen the organization at work in other disasters.

One, who gave $20, was in Massachusetts during the floods last spring, and the second, who contributed $80, was in Nicaragua during the great earthquake there several years ago.

For the benefit of the flood sufferers the Earle Theater will present a special midnight performance Saturday.

Washingtonians continued to fill the coffers here for the relief of the flood areas.

Those who sent their money to The Washington Post's fund, which reached $8,641.13, with $282.73 arriving yesterday, included:

Harrisonburg Acquires Two New Fire Trucks

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 4.—The Harrisonburg City Council last night purchased two new fire trucks, costing $6,000 each, one for each fire company.

Volunteer firemen say this is the first equipment the city has purchased in 15 years, but during this period the Harrisonburg fire loss has been the lowest in the State.

'Parade of Horrors' To Be Driver Lesson

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP).—A 5-mile "horror parade" of wrecked automobiles, ambulances, hearses and floats showing "dead" and "dying" will move slowly through Jacksonville Saturday. Officials say the affair is planned as an object lesson to those who are heavy on the accelerator and light in the head.

'Sit-Down' Striker For Love Anchored By Ball and Chain

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Feb. 4 (AP).—Harold Hulen's romantic "sit-down" antics got some new furbishings today, including a readily photographed ball and chain and a radio broadcast.

City officials called at the apartment house home of Florence Hulbert where Hulen is seated, chained to a radiator, in his quest for her hand, and asked him to desist in the interest of "civic pride."

"Have you gentlemen a warrant?" Hulen asked Mayor John S. Lodwick and Police Chief William A. Payne.

Told they did not, he insisted he would sit where he was.

This afternoon friends of Hulen attached a heavy ball and chain to his leg. He protested to Chief Payne, who said he would be glad to order the three youths arrested if Hulen would come to the City Hall and sign a warrant.

Hulen began his sit-down strike yesterday morning, demanding a definite answer from Miss Hulbert, to whom he said he had proposed marriage twice weekly the past year.

Present Credentials.

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—Ambassadors and Ministers to the Court of St. James presented their credentials today to Britain's new ruler, King George VI. Ray Atherton, Charge D'Affaires, represented United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham, who is on a brief visit to his home in Louisville.

Civil Service Shake-up.

"Pressure of work" is the official explanation for the recent reorganization in the Civil Service Commission by which the applications and certification sections were elevated to be separate divisions on a par with the examining division of which these sections once were part.

Some people around town, however, are wondering whether there isn't more to the shake-up than meets the casual eye. It has been recalled that in a confidential study of the internal workings of the commission made about three years ago by Lewis Meriam, of Brookings Institution, such a reorganization was recommended along with the consolidation of the offices of secretary, then held by Claude Babcock, and chief examiner, held by Howard Edson, into the present position of chief examiner.

In the Meriam report the principal reason offered for making separate divisions of the applications and certification sections was that under the old system it was felt too much responsibility was lodged in a single spot and that there should be more of checks and balances.

The Navy Department is planning to revise its regulations concerning outside employment of its civilian personnel to forbid civilians holding stock in any company with which the Navy does business from working in the department. A recent decision of the Judge Advocate General held that the law permitted the Navy to forbid employes from taking private employment which might interfere with satisfactory performance of their Government work.

Statistician Myers.

Like Louis Metcalfe Walling, who was sworn in as head of the public contracts division under the Walsh-Healey act the other day, Robert J. Myers, the Children's Bureau's new head of the division of statistical research, is a young man—only 33. Iowa-born he spent most of his childhood and youth in Kansas, being educated at Washburn College, in Topeka.

Five feet eleven inches tall and tipping the beams around 160 pounds, Myers plays a fair game of tennis, goes hunting and fishing whenever he gets the time and likes to play handball. At Washburn, however, he didn't display much interest in athletics, spending most of his extra-curricular time debating and singing with the glee club. Myers doesn't sing much now, but is a good music listener, also a devotee of the theater.

From Washburn College, Myers went to the University of Chicago for graduate work. His stay there was interrupted for a couple of years to teach statistics and labor economics at Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn., and Grinnell College at Grinnell, Iowa. While in Chicago he also served as chief statistician of the Illinois emergency relief commission and the Illinois WPA.

Although you'll hear him referred to as "doctor," Myers won't actually receive his Ph. D. for another month. He's completed all the work for the degree though, the subject of his doctor's thesis being "Economic Aspects of the Production of Men's Clothing." Myers himself is rather particular about the clothes he wears, likes them to fit well. His suits generally run to grays; he alternates between white and colored shirts and is a bit of an aficionado, as Hemingway would put it, on bright ties.

It may be that Diary perspective of ours again, but there's something incongruous about a little paragraph in a recent Navy court-martial order. It is a recommendation for clemency "in the case of an enlisted man convicted of drunkenness, assaulting his superior officer while in the execution of the duties of his office and conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline."

The recommendation for clemency is based, believe it or not, on these grounds, "the accused is a full-blooded Cherokee Indian, from a race that is unusually susceptible to the worst effects of alcoholic liquor, and that the accused was at the time of the commission of the offenses so inflamed with liquor as to make him lose the customary respect and deference he ordinarily showed his superior officers." That's all, we thought, he was accused of.

TVA Fertilizer.

Dr. Harry A. Curtiss, in charge of TVA's plant food research division ("plant food" is the TVA's way of saying "fertilizer") has just received two patents on new processes for making fertilizers. They're the eighth and ninth such patents gotten out by TVA employes.

There's nothing new about the TVA fertilizer itself—it's the usual commercial triplesuperphosphate—but it's made with an electrical furnace that makes production costs about as small as the Republican representation in Congress. In three year the TVA has produced 50,000 tons of the stuff, TVA having made an arrangement by which it supplies the fertilizer free to State extension services for demonstration projects.

One part of a selected farm is untreated, another is sprinkled liberally with the stuff. Demonstration projects have been set up on about 25,000 farms in the valley and in 14 other States, from Connecticut to Texas.

Postals.

A welcome hand to James F. McAdams and Philip W. Voltz, newly arrived at the Farm Credit Administration. . . . We make this announcement with an "it's your own fault if you do" attitude: the Farm Credit Club is sponsoring a 12-lesson course in contract bridge. . . . The Farm Credit Union will hold a dance spiced by refreshments tomorrow night at the Thomas Circle Club.

Postmaster General Farley dedicates a new postoffice at Hamilton, N. Y., tomorrow afternoon.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

Well, there's nothing in the world that scares me as much as a sure thing. I heard a fella tellin' about a horse he was gonna bet on the other day and he had a thousand reasons why his horse was gonna win. Well, after the race, he found out there was just five reasons why the horse lost—that was the other five horses.

There's a weak link to every chain. That's the reason a fella should be awfully careful about recommendin' anything to his friends. I learned my lesson from bitter experience. Not long ago they was havin' a picnic and a barbecue down home and they wanted me to send them an outdoor attraction. They says, "We want somethin' sensational that we've never seen before." Right away I thought of this champion nail sitter that had worked with me in a carnival show and I knew that he would give these people down there a thrill of their lives. This fella not only walked on these sharp points of these nails and sat on 'em, but he laid down on 'em with his bare back, with another board filled with sharp-pointed nails restin' on his chest and he'd let 'em lead a horse over him. Well, when the fella got down there, he found out he couldn't do his act out in the open because the Arkansas mosquitoes were so bad.

Broad Inquiry Of D. C. Set-up Is Authorized

Sen. King to Ask $10,000 to Finance Long-Sought Investigation.

A broad inquiry into District government set-up, based principally on the four-year-old Roberts study, was authorized yesterday by the Senate District Committee upon recommendation of Senator King, chairman, and Senator Capper, ranking minority member.

A resolution asking the Senate Committee on Audit and Control to allocate $10,000 for the inquiry will be introduced today by Senator King.

William A. Roberts, former people's counsel and now practicing law in Washington, is expected to be named special counsel for the committee in the reorganization inquiry.

Suffrage to Be Studied.

A second phase of the inquiry, Senator King said, will be the question of local suffrage as recommended by the Jacobs committee on fiscal relations.

Problems of fiscal relations and District revenue will not be taken up until the House District Committee has had time to investigate the recommendations in the Jacobs report.

A special sub-committee will be appointed by King this week to conduct the public hearings.

Part of the $10,000 requested probably will be spent in having printed the voluminous report made by the special committee of former Budget Director Lewis Douglas, District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, and Roberts.

King said that Roberts will be engaged to revise and condense the report.

Council Vote Planned.

The Jacobs committee's recommendations relative to local suffrage were that Washington residents be permitted to vote for a municipal council and conduct periodical referendums on local questions.

The Senate committee voted to report favorably five bills. They are the anti-gambling bill aimed at the numbers game, the uniform sales measure, the bill to define the qualifications of lawyers, and two bills to grant healing art licenses.

A sub-committee composed of Senators Copeland, Hughes and Capper was named to consider the bill to establish a lunacy commission.

Tobacco Tax Gain Is Over 57 Million

By the Associated Press.

Tobacco taxes brought the Government $536,102,850 in 1936, a gain of $57,735,132 over 1935.

Cigarette taxes at 6 cents a package of 20, the Internal Revenue Department reported yesterday, accounted for $459,520,565 of the total. Revenue from cigars was $12,919,662 and from other manufactured tobacco—chewing, smoking and snuff—$65,588,149.

The 1936 figures compared with 1935 tobacco tax collections of $478,367,718. Cigarette tax receipts that year were $403,855,259; cigars, $12,002,008, and other manufactured tobacco products $61,263,933.

Cigarettes manufactured in North Carolina accounted for $250,343,978, or more than half the total cigarette levy. Virginia was second with $134,544,668, and Kentucky third with $34,436,190.

Vote for D.C. Franchise Pledged by Rep. Patrick

A definite promise to vote for any bill giving residents of the District a vote was made yesterday by Representative Luther Patrick, of Alabama, speaking before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel.

Introduced by President Arthur W. Defenderfer, the Representative declared that he felt the District had been made a political football too long and that its people should have a vote. "If I get a chance to vote on any bill giving the District a vote, I am going to do it," he said.

Diplomats Troop to School For Study of U. S. Constitution

Professor Ben A. Arneson, of American University, Reminds Envoys Americans Do Not Understand Charter.

With shining morning faces, members of the Diplomatic Corps trooped into Hurst Hall at American University yesterday with all the sheepish hesitation of schoolboys embarking on a new adventure.

They came to attend the first of a course of 18 lectures dealing with the political institutions of the United States. They heard Prof. Ben A. Arneson, of American University Graduate School, given elementary talk on the Constitution. And they asked questions of the speaker at the close, perplexity showing on knitted foreheads and with gesturing of hands.

Spain's Don Fernando de los Rios was there. He pointed out that as a former professor he did not mind the change in role. In front of him sat Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, Portuguese Minister, whose country has withdrawn recognition from the loyalist government of Spain.

Distinguished "Pupils."

Others who attended included the minister from Panama, Senor Dr. Don Augusto S. Boyd, A. B. Bueno do Prado, First Secretary of the Brazilian Legation; Senor Don Hector Diaz Leguizamon, First Secretary of the Argentine Republic; Senor Don Luis Quintanilla, Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, and Tswen-ling Tsui, substituting with four countrymen, for the envoy from China.

Prof. Arneson, who prefaced his lecture by saying, "If you don't know more than the average American citizen about the Constitution, you know very little," told his distinguished listeners that the charter is "the oldest written constitution in the world now functioning" and that since it came into being as "a result of the play and counterplay of political forces," it was essentially the product of compromises.

Many of the lecturer's remarks were centered around the courts and the Constitution and his outline of New Deal legislation that had stumbled at the hurdles were keenly followed by the audience. He maintained that "on the whole legislative supremacy is better than judicial supremacy," but that the "youthfulness of the United States as a nation and its heterogeneity made judicial review desirable."

"What we should do, perhaps, is to educate the court into a more liberal interpretation of the Constitution," he added. "That would not be revolution. According to the most recent historical research it would be in accord with the spirit of the framers."

Citizens' Group Attacks P. U. C. For RecentActs

The Northeast Conference of Citizens' Associations, made up of 12 associations in that section, was told by a special committee last night that recent acts of the Public Utilities Commission have not been in the interest of the public.

The committee was appointed to make a study of the commission's action in raising fares and in allowing one-man street cars, among other things. After finding that these acts were not in the interests of the public, the committee made some recommendations. These, however, were so ambiguous that the conference ordered the report recommitted and a new series of recommendations drawn up.

The conference adopted a resolution urging that the office of people's counsel be filled immediately, and recommended William McK. Clayton for the post.

Members of the conference complained that buses had been speeding on Bladensburg road and New York avenue. One member said he paced a bus and that it was traveling in excess of 45 miles an hour.

It was announced that the new fire house at Fourteenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast would be completed about April 1. Citizens in the northeast section were urged to attend the dedicatory exercises.

Speed Is Proposed In Reorganization

Proposals to rush the President's entire plan for overhauling the Government to passage this session will be discussed at the initial meeting of the new Senate Reorganization Committee tomorrow, it was learned last night.

Ostensibly, the first meeting has been called for organization purposes, and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Senate majority leader, is expected to be nominated chairman.

Robinson later is expected to be nominated for chairmanship of the joint House and Senate Reorganization Committee.

The President is said to be insistent that his complete reorganization plan be considered this session, and already differences are developing in party ranks over whether it should be embraced in a single omnibus bill, or can be more easily maneuvered in separate legislation.

Memorial Services Set.

Perpetuating the memory of Abe Dresner, Maurice Narcisenfeld, Harry I. Carrel and Mike Jacobs, the Amity Club will hold special memorial services at their headquarters this evening. Rabbi Solomon I. Metz will deliver the sermon.

Steam Will Drive New Dreadnaughts

By the Associated Press.

The Navy announced last night that two new battleships to be built this year would be powered by steam turbines, with mechanical reduction gears rather than by electric drive.

Some years ago the Navy pioneered in electric drives and that type of propulsion was used in the last five battleships built.

The decision to go back to steam was reached after exhaustive study of speed, tonnage and other factors, Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, chief of the Bureau of Engineering, said.

Pointing out that the new dreadnaughts were limited to 35,000 tons by treaty, Admiral Bowen said elimination of motors and generators required for electric propulsion would mean a space and weight saving of 20 to 25 per cent.

Rifle Body to Back Curb on Firearms

Legislation striking directly at the criminal use of firearms by curbing the interstate shipment of such weapons by or to underworld characters as provided in the Copeland bill is expected to be indorsed by the board of directors of the National Rifle Association in their sixty-sixth annual meeting to be held this afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel.

The board is made up of 60 men, representing almost every State.

Chevy Chase Unit Opposes Store Center

Citizens' Group Protests Plan at Hearing of Zone Board.

Proposals to erect a "park and shop" center on the southeast corner of Connecticut avenue and Legation street northwest brought protests from residents of fashionable Chevy Chase yesterday as public hearing resumed before the District Zoning Commission.

Led by Edwin S. Hege, president of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, opposition forces rose in a body, urging the commission to refuse application of Fulton Gordon, local realtor, who owns the property.

Chevy Chase, the protesting citizens contended, now has ample shopping facilities and any additional commercial enterprise would only be a detriment to the community. Gordon's property at present is zoned for an apartment building. He seeks rezoning to permit construction of the "park and shop" stores.

James S. Wilkes, attorney for Gordon, argued that the proposed shopping center would facilitate auto parking while Chevy Chase citizens made daily purchases. The nearest "park and shop" center for residents of the section is now at Connecticut avenue and Porter street northwest. Home owners as far away as Kensington, Md., would benefit by the proposed project, Wilkes told the commission.

An executive committee of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, Hege said, considered the proposed shopping center from all angles and decided it would be "highly detrimental" to the community.

"If the zoning commission wants to make every other block along Connecticut avenue commercial—and I don't believe it does—why this is a fine way to start. If application for this proposed project is granted, it will seriously injure Chevy Chase's standing as a residential section."

Hege pointed out the controversial "park and shop" center—if permitted—would be directly across the street from strictly residential property.

"Home owners and apartment house dwellers," Hege said, "don't want to look from their windows onto commercial sites. The proposed shopping center would undoubtedly bring a tenement aspect to adjacent apartment buildings.

"Adjoining property values would decrease and apartment owners, in order to keep tenants, would be forced to lower rents. An influx of undesirable residents would probably result."

Gordon's property is at present undeveloped. The site forms a deep ravine and has been termed "unsightly." To erect an apartment building on the property, Attorney Wilkes argued, would require a foundation at least three stories underground.

"We now have plenty of stores in the section," the citizens' head declared. "Residents of Chevy Chase don't want to become self-sustaining in their shopping needs. They want to come downtown and buy things beyond their everyday requirements.

"We don't want to build a town out there—we are happy to remain just a suburb of Washington."

A petition bearing 34 names in opposition to the proposed enterprise was filed with the commission.

Swelling Heads Explained

Dr. Hrdlica Declares Skull Growth Is Normal Through Middle Age; Bases Stand on Measurement of Many Scholars.

If, while shopping for a spring chapeau, you discover you need the next size larger than your 1936 model don't be alarmed.

It does not mean that elephantiasis is setting in.

Or even that you think an awful lot of yourself.

Be reassured by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, who has examined practically every skull of any consequence with the exception of Yorick's, that a growing head is nothing to worry about. Indeed, if your brain and your cranium are not getting bigger, provided you are still this side of 50 or 60, then something is the matter.

By way of the public relations department of the Smithsonian Institution, of which he is curator of physical anthropology, Dr. Hrdlicka yesterday divulged a few interesting facts about craniums, or crania, as you prefer.

His conclusions are based on measurements he made of the upper stories of august scholars in the National Academy of Sciences, of a large group of Indians and of a number of "old Americans"—persons with at least three generations of American ancestry.

Similar investigations by French and Russian "dome doctors" produced results which corresponded strikingly with Dr. Hrdlicka's.

Among the "old Americans," he found the length and breadth of the heads of men and women alike increase up to middle age or thereabouts. Women's heads also became slightly higher, a phenomenon which was not noted among the men.

While your head is getting bigger, your facial features are changing, Dr. Hrdlicka found. The later results partly, though only indirectly, from the cranial increase. The way you chew your food has more to do with your facial proportions than you would ever suspect.

Last year Dr. Hrdlicka told how the nose, ears and mouth increase in size through adult life. These changes may be partly responsible for the altered appearance of, say, Aunt Martha, whom you hadn't seen in 10 years.

The Smithsonian curator's latest measurement reports show that your nose probably will keep getting longer and broader until you reach 60, or longer, that the mouth grows into the seventh decade and the ears will still be expanding when you are 80 or older.

The scalp, contrary wrapper that it is, gets thinner while the brain and cranium are getting bigger.

"Just why and how this (head growth) should continue after adult life is reached will be a point for future determination," said Dr. Hrdlicka, giving hint of brain bulletins yet to come.

Red Rider Hit By Education Chief in Talk

The fundamental principles of democracy are endangered by the red rider attempt to suppress freedom of speech, inquiry, discussion or learning, Dr. William G. Carr, director of research for the National Education Association, declared last night.

Yesterday, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley informed The Post that the Women's City Club had adopted a motion favoring the Kennedy bill to repeal the red rider.

Speaking in the Open Forum at the Central Y. M. C. A., Dr. Carr said his association will exert every effort to secure repeal of the rider.

"The association," he said, "welcomes and requests the support of all citizens who see that intellectual freedom is a public safeguard and the suppression of this freedom inevitably leads to violent and extreme changes in the social order."

Dr. Carr said the real issue involved in the red rider is not the rights of the teachers, but the right of the public to have an effective school program.

"As future citizens," he declared, "children can scarcely be taught too soon to discuss issues intelligently to assemble and weigh evidence and to reach wise decisions. These important skills cannot be acquired in a vacuum."

Jefferson High Site Is Opposed By Rep. Collins

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, yesterday voiced his opposition to building a new Jefferson Junior High School on the site over which District officials and owners have been squabbling for several years.

The District Commissioners have tried for the last six years to acquire the rest of the southwest site at Seventh and I streets, either by condemnation or purchase, but the price has always been too high. The property is owned by Johnson & Wimsatt.

This year the District heads decided to ask Congress for authority to use a $200,000 appropriation for construction of the school to bargain with in purchasing the rest of the site or a new tract.

Collins today, after an inspection of the area, said the site is too near the railroad and he proposed instead that the new school be located on land adjacent to the old building at Sixth and D streets southwest.

At the same time he emphasized the need for a new school, placing it first on the list of projects in the 1938 bill.

Other school sites were inspected by the sub-committee on District appropriations, but Collins declined to comment on the whole program of school construction other than to say that some appeared more necessary than others.

Today the sub-committee will visit the southeast and Georgetown incinerators, the main public library and the new Georgetown branch library, and the proposed site for a public health center near New York avenue and First street.

A Washington Motion Picture Executive Is Moved Up to Directorship of His Company in Australia

Harry Hunter, Local Branch Exchange Manager of Paramount, Is Put in Charge of the Antipodes; Will Be Tendered Farewell Banquet by Capital Showmen; Benefit Performances in Several Theaters Promise to Augment Red Cross Flood Relief Fund; News Notes and Gossip of Current Theater.

WORD was received in Washington yesterday that Harry Hunter, for many years local branch exchange manager for Paramount Pictures, has been promoted to the general directorship of all Paramount interests in the Antipodes.

BELL.

This places Mr. Hunter, one of the most genial and most capable of the motion picture executives in the Capital these many years, in complete charge of all Paramount theaters in Australia and New Zealand, as well as in control of film distribution of his company's product.

In compliment to Mr. Hunter, and in recognition of his services to the industry in this territory, the Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11 in the national organization, which he helped organize, in association with Charles Kranz, local manager of United Artists, and in which he has been an officer since its inception, will tender him a testimonial dinner in the small ballroom of the Willard Hotel on the evening of Tuesday, February 16, at 8 o'clock. Preceding the banquet, cocktails will be served in the Variety Club quarters at 7:30.

Rudolph Berger, who has long been an associate of the departing executive on film row, as Washington branch exchange manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will be chairman of the dinner committee. Other members will be A. Julian Brylawski, Charles Kranz, Sam Galanty, Carter Barron, Frank Durkee, Lawrence Schanberger, the last two representatives of Baltimore exhibitors; Vincent Dougherty and John J. Payette.

Mr. Hunter is expected to leave for "down under" shortly after this testimonial from his affiliates of many years. This means that Harry has no more than a fortnight or so among old friends in the National Capital before cross-continenting to embark for the long cruise to the largest of the islands, or the smallest of the continents, however you may happen to feel about it.

Congratulations and the best of luck upon the recognition of services that deserve all that has come to you, old friend. But we are selfishly sorry to lose you.

With "Dead End" a seeming surety for the National Theater in the near future, it now comes to light that on February 22, Washington's Birthday, Max Gordon is bringing his production of "Pride and Prejudice" back to the house where it celebrated its premiere, for a week's engagement. This was a play for which the critical fraternity of Washington prophesied a New York run and they were not mistaken. It will be pleasant to view this Jane Austen fiction again, as adapted to the stage by Helen Jerome, if for no other reason than to check up on our original critical appraisal.

• • • •

Seats now are on sale at the box office of the National Theater for the special benefit performance of "Reflected Glory," starring Tallulah Bankhead, to be given in the National on Thursday afternoon, February 11, for the flood sufferers of the stricken areas of the Midwest.

The entire gross receipts of this performance are to be donated to the American Red Cross for relief purposes, as already has been signalized in this space.

This special benefit matinee was suggested by Miss Bankhead herself and communicated to Chairman Cary T. Grayson, of the Red Cross, by her father, the Speaker of the House of Representatives. In addition to this gratuitous presentation of her play, Miss Bankhead will be seen at the National next week in the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

It is reported that a group of New York theater managers already have inaugurated plans for a "flood relief week" which will be marked by a series of special performances, following Miss Bankhead's generous Washington gesture as a model of procedure.

Miss Bankhead and her father, the Speaker, together with representatives of the Red Cross, will be guests at a tea in the Mayflower on Sunday afternoon, at which plans will be perfected for the matinee on Thursday. Society groups are being organized for the disposal of boxes and orchestra seats to insure the financial success of this contribution to one of the most worthy and most urgent relief enterprises with which the country has been faced in recent years.

• • • •

Personal aside to Miss Emily Wilcox: To date, no release date has been set for the national presentation of "Lost Horizon," Columbia Pictures production, starring Ronald Colman, with Jane Wyatt. It should be coming along soon, but just how soon, there is, at the moment, no way of determining.

• • • •

While all of these other flood benefits are going on, it is interesting to note that tomorrow at 10:30 the Rialto Theater will present a special children's show for the same cause.

Joe Brown and His Radio Kiddies will be seen on the stage and on the screen will be shown the official Red Cross films of last year's flood conditions. A full hour's revue will be staged by Brown and his youngsters and will enlist the services of all the kiddies so familiar to listeners at the loudspeakers.

Admission charges will be 25 cents for children and 35 cents for adults. The complete proceeds are to be donated to the flood sufferers through the American Red Cross.

Burlesque, distinctly, is looking up. This season's presentations of the Independent Burlesque Association at the Gayety Theater, presided over by Col. James Jeremiah Lake, Beau Brummel of Ninth street and Chesterfield of the sports arenas, are the best-dressed, best-staged and best-peopled that have come along in the past ten years or so. This week, the straight men are wearing white ties and tails to the manner born and the ensemble is costumed almost in the Ziegfeldian or Charles B. Dillingham fashion. And that Margie Kelly—boy, an aspirin, quick!

Well-Well-Well Note.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 4.—Nothing quite so worried looking as a $5,000-a-week star after he has lost $100 at roulette. Constance Bennett uses a silver-framed menu card at home, even when her lone luncheon item is a stuffed prune. I always want to add, "doakie" to Jack Oakie's name. Joan Crawford likes to sing duets with opera star records. Add Hollywoodese: Meveau riche, Jean Harlow's priceless description of her silver fox: "A cape once better worn by wild animals."

Grace Moore could reverse the order of her two names and be criticized for nothing but the spelling. Nutshell description of Mae West: Hips, hips hurrah! Every time I hear that song "A Latin from Manhattan" I think of Ricardo Cortez. In need of good pictures to bolster faded prestige: Robert Montgomery. Edna Mae Oliver sniffs that way off-screen, too.

Wonder if Clark Gable has been asked to indorse one of those dimple-producing machines? Wallace Beery rhymes with "always cheery," which is quite appropriate. Bet many a chorus girl owns a fine wardrobe because she heard that "clothes make the man." Is Ted Healy lonesome when he is separated from those three stooges? Peas from the same pod: Joan Fontaine and the late Jeanne Eagles. Frances Langford's waist is so narrow, at times she looks unnatural. And I must not forget to ask Mary Astor if she has an apple a day.

If you are still enviously wondering what became of the five life-like dolls used in the recent Quintepic, here is the lowdown: Two of the dolls were given to an out-of-work property man with as many children. Two more went to a studio laborer with twin daughters. The fifth was given to a wardrobe woman who had been unable to afford a Christmas doll for her child.

I had hardly recovered from the pleasant shock of that series of generous gestures, when Fred MacMurray confided (not for print, and I will probably catch it for blatting) this nice story about his wife. She was once a model at a smart boulevard gown shop. She buys her clothes there now, and she painstakingly spreads her purchases over many days in order to give every on commission salesgirl a chance to profit.

Bing Crosby stepped up to the betting window at Santa Anita and planked down a wager on a horse. A man standing nearby stopped the crooner, saying, "Mr. Crosby, I'm the owner of that horse, and it hasn't got a chance to win." "Is that so?" exclaimed Bing, "Well, brother, if your horse is that bad, this is going to be a long race, because I own the other four entries."

During the filming of Grace Moore's latest picture, Mary Garden, long the idol of Miss Moore, spent an entire day coaching Grace to sing "La Tosca." As a reward, she was to have the unusual privilege of being present on the set when Miss Moore recorded for the picture. But at the last minute, the shooting schedule was changed, and when Miss Garden was escorted into the recording stage Grace was singing "Minnie the Moocher." At the ditty's end, Mary screamed across the set: "That would be perfect—if they only had you sitting in a bath tub!"

Headliners From Four Clubs To Join in Flood Fund Show

Lee Everett Will Act as Master of Ceremonies at Benefit Performance Saturday Night at Earle Theater.

Headline entertainers from four leading Washington night clubs have joined the talent which will appear in the flood relief midnight benefit show at the Earle Theater this Saturday evening, February 6, starting at 11:30.

The Three-X Sisters, favorite singing stars of the National Broadcasting Co., will come down from New York for the benefit program, which will also include the complete Earle stage show, and on the screen Kay Francis in "Stolen Holiday."

Rachel Curley, singing start of the Manhattan Merry Go Round radio programs; Le Paul, ace of card manipulators; the Mattison Rhythms, youthful dancing stars, and the Bredwins, in "Funny Feats," all are included in the regular Earle stage bill, opening today. They all will appear in the extra show Saturday midnight.

Maxim Lowe, director of entertainment at the Shoreham, has arranged for Leon Leonidoff, continental troubadour, to appear on the program and present songs in his distinctive manner. Mrs. Helen Hamilton, of the Russian Troika, will send a large group of the unusual entertainers who appear at this popular Connecticut avenue club. These include Capt. Nich Hope, accordion virtuoso; Yasha Nikogossoff, who presents the famous Caucasian flaming dagger dance; Marusia Sava, singer of gypsy songs; Eleana Lolik, dancing star; Emil Madinoff, Mischa Markoff and the gypsy chorus of ten voices.

Peter Borras, host at the Madrillon, is sending a talented blues singer, Helen Forrest, to lend her individual interpretations of modern songs to the program. From the Cocoanut Grove, known throughout the city for its Broadway entertainment, will come Frank McCormick and Ruth Kidd, singing and dancing headliners, and the Eight Co-Eds, dancing starlets, appearing through the courtesy of the club.

Tickets for this performance, the outstanding amusement bargain in Washington, may be obtained at the box office of any Warner theater in Washington.

Otto Cass Chosen Deputy WPA Head

Otto J. Cass, director of operations for the District WPA, was named deputy administrator yesterday, succeeding William C. Cleary, who resigned because of ill health.

The appointment was made by Commissioner George E. Allen. Cleary has been ill for several weeks and told Allen he was unable to resume his duties.

Until about two years ago, when he entered District WPA service, Cass was connected with the American Red Cross. His position as director of operations was filled by promotion of Michael M. Cohan, assistant director.

Appear on Earle Screen Today

When "Stolen Holiday" is presented on the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater today, the principal roles will be played by Kay Francis, the star of the picture; Claude Rains, Ian Hunter and Alison Skipworth. The likenesses reproduced above are those of Mr. Hunter and Miss Francis, with an anonymous pigeon in the center. This cast promises a superior entertainment.

Electrocution Movies Considered in Chicago

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Warden Frank Sain, of the Cook County Jail, today disclosed he was considering taking motion pictures of an electrocution. The films would be shown before prisoners in an attempt to influence them to renounce criminal careers.

The warden termed the project a "great crime deterrent," but said Sheriff John Toman would have to decide whether the movies would be made.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Feb. 4.

CUSTOM: In one room of the White House are accumulated the gifts sent to the President's family by admirers from all lands. The packages remain unopened in that room for exactly one year. After one year they're opened and either kept or disposed of . . . This practice was introduced by Mrs. Roosevelt when she discovered that many of the gift donors usually asked for a donation from the President within one month, pointing to their own generosity in sending the gift . . . Whenever that happens now, the unopened package is returned to the sender forthwith.

• • • •

SUCCESS: Gypsy Rose Lee, the burlesque stripper who rose to "Follies" fame, was relating of her new movie contract with Twentieth Century-Fox Films . . . "I'm getting two G's a week," Miss Lee confided, "and I don't mean strings."

• • • •

DEFEAT: Michael Todd, the producer of the forthcoming play, "Call Me Ziggy," went to Atlantic City for the tryouts last week-end. The script calls for the use of a penguin in the play, and so Todd took with him a newly purchased Personality Penguin . . . Unfortunately, when he arrived, he was told that the penguin had been written out of the show. He therefore brought it back to New York with him—back to his room at the St. Moritz Hotel . . . At 3 a. m. the hotel detective knocked at his door, demanding: "Mr. Todd, Mr. Todd, this is the hotel detective. Take that penguin outa your room!"

FAME: Two patrons at the Aviation Show here wandered through the hall yesterday, pausing before each booth. A spieler at the Manhattan Aviation School booth asked: "Are you boys interested in flying?" . . . When they nodded, he continued: "It's so easy to learn how to fly. Just give us a chance, and who knows—some day you may be famous, recognized, etc" . . . The men listened attentively, stated they were interested, and delivered their address cards. One was Frank Hawkes. The other Clyde Pangborn.

• • • •

ENTERPRISE: Gene Towne, the movie scenarist, met Ed Hatrick, who directs the Hearst newsreels, and began explaining how a newsreel company can lick the popularity of the March of Time. "Hire me, and I'd do it for you," Towne proposed . . . Hatrick was impressed, and offered: "Come to my office tomorrow and the job is yours" . . . "Oh, no," Towne returned. "If it's such a cinch to get this job, it might be just as easy to lose it. So—I don't want it!"

• • • •

TRAGEDY: Sone one going through the files of the Federal Theater Project happened to pick a script which had been rejected only a short while ago. The observant couldn't believe his eyes at the comment written across the cover—but there it was, in capital letters: "REJECTED—NOT COMMERCIAL" . . . The name of the play was "Pride and Prejudice!"

• • • •

OFFER: Benny Rubin and Dave Rubinoff ventured into Yorkville, and paused in front of a German bierstube . . . Rubin turned to the violinist and said: "Come on Dave—let's go in and get a Mickey!"

• • • •

SUCCESS: It happened at the Trocadero last week-end. A Zanuck screen star entered and smothered his words in conversation. "Look at that guy," a director lamented. "When he opens his mouth he can't even say 'Boo'" . . . "That's right," his cameraman agreed, "but he can say: 'Yes, Mr. Zanuck, that's right, Mr. Zanuck. Yes, Mr. Zanuck.'"

• • • •

GRATITUDE: Last summer the French Casino brought Zdenek Koubek to its revue here. Koubek was Europe's champion female sprinter until an operation altered her sex. After the revue completed its run here, Koubek returned to his native Prague . . . Yesterday the management received a letter of thanks from him, in which he expressed his gratitude, especially for the opportunities of seeing New York's wonders. . . . "In all my 24 years," he wrote, "man and girl—I've never seen anything like it!"

• • • •

AMITY: A local Nazi publicist was at Leon and Eddie's last night orating about the wonders Hitler had wrought in Germany. "He's all right," the publicist stated, "and he has many friends. Yes sir—Hitler's friends are legion" . . . "Yes," Wilkie Mahoney agreed, "the Black Legion!"

* X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1937 21

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

It is becoming increasingly difficult to work up a case of sympathy for the poor, downtrodden ball player currently embroiled in salary battles with soulless club owners.

What with the public prints daily reproducing pictures of these same overworked, underpaid toilers of the diamond risking their complexions on the bathing beaches and golf links of ritzy Florida resorts, their salary squabbles are hardly a cause for a great surge of righteous indignation by the reading public against the close-fisted club owners.

POVICH.

And the chances are that the most persistent and adamant of the holdouts who bleats the longest and the loudest at the wage scale is probably being offered a sum that would make the average reader's income look like a wee drappe in the bucket.

But when Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, makes the kind of a crack he did the other day while discussing player salaries and taking a general rap at the Yankee holdout brigade, it is the easier to understand the player's own side of the salary picture.

"The trouble with most ball players," said the colonel, "is that they don't realize that they've been paid for what they did last season and that a ball club takes a gamble on contracting in advance to pay them such huge sums."

Which argument can be very easily adopted by the holdout ball player in turn as the very reason why he is probably demanding an increased salary for the next season.

It is true, as Rupperi says, that the ball player has been paid for what he did last season, but if those past performances are such as to warrant a pay raise, then, of course, he has a right to expect it. If, perchance, the player had had a poor season, it is a fair guess that the club owner would not absent-mindedly forget to recall that fact when inserting the salary clauses.

In his particular squabble with Lou Gehrig, Owner Ruppert is eminently correct in disparaging Gehrig's record of playing in more than 2,000 consecutive games. On that point, Gehrig's claim for more pay than the $31,000 he drew last year can hardly succeed.

"Who cares about records?" Ruppert asked in ridiculing Gehrig's claim to fame as an iron man, and as far as records of that type go, the answer is an emphatic "nobody." The fans might thrill to Gehrig's home runs, to his fancy play around first base or his singles in the pinch, but when the call is for a base hit by Gehrig they are blissfully oblivious to Gehrig's durability.

In striking contrast to Gehrig's iron-man reputation, Babe Ruth was a brittle sort, pulling up with lame muscles or being absent from the line-up from a variety of different causes, including too many hot dogs or bottles of pop, yet Ruth captured the fans' imagination to a greater degree than Gehrig could ever hope to achieve.

Ruth drew down his record salary of $80,000 because of his magnetism at the gate, because he hit home runs and struck out with equal gusto. Because, in short, he had color, an asset which Gehrig does not boast in his always predictable and mechanical movements.

It is doubtful if Gehrig, even though he may top Ruth's home run record, will ever approach even the $40,000 mark in salary. Ruth's wage was predicated not upon his value to the Yankees as a ball player but upon the fame of his name at the turnstiles. The laddie known as Lou is being paid only as a ball player, not as a gate attraction. Hence the disparity in wages.

In Short——

In the same category with Gehrig is Jimmy Foxx, who, on the season after he had knocked 56 homers to come within four of Ruth's record, could command from the Athletics a salary in the neighborhood of only $20,000 . . . it is a nice neighborhood, as neighborhoods go, but nothing compared to the salary Foxx could have claimed had he boasted even a spark of color on the field . . . or off it . . . Dizzy Dean's salary demands always receive much more consideration because of his showmanship on and off the field which directly results in more dollars for the Cardinal management . . . Washington teams have been notably lacking in color for too many years . . . Buck Newsom is the only individual on the Nats with even a dash of showmanship . . . although in his case it is hardly showmanship but a natural bent for the laughable things in life . . . Goose Goslin and Jake Powell had color of a different sort . . . Goslin's clumsy antics as a rookie earned him the distinction and it was Powell's utter disregard for physical injury either to himself or the opposition which set him up as a man apart from the common herd of ball players.

Dark Horses Threaten Terps' Hopes to Beat Cavalier Boxers

With the return of Ed Egnell to active duty not only possible, but very probable, the University of Maryland's ring team will be at full strength and in the proverbial pink for tomorrow night's important duel with Virginia at Charlottesville.

Counted out earlier in the week by the athletic board after failing to measure up to required standards in several studies, it was revealed last night that ways and means of returning the big heavyweight to the eligible list may be found. His fate will be decided definitely this afternoon before the squad departs for the scene of combat.

While Maryland is rated a top-heavy favorite to score its first win over the Cavaliers, things are not as rosy as they might be. Virginia has two men in Maynard Harlow, welterweight, and Ray Schmidt, light-heavy, who will enter the ring distinct favorites, and a couple of dark horses who may spill their opponents for unexpected losses.

Jacobs a Dark Horse.

One of these is Ben Jacobs, clever and hard-hitting bantam, who will meet Ed Shegogue. Jacobs kayoed Bob Brown, of North Carolina, in less than two minutes of the first round last week, and in so doing served notice that he will be bad medicine for all future opponents.

Virginia exhibited another surprisingly good craftsman at 125-pounds in Ashby Barksdale, who battered Bob Vicks to the resin last week while making his collegiate debut. Barksdale will tangle with Tom Birmingham and he'll have to be better than average to take this one.

While Virginia's starting line-up will not be announced until tomorrow, the veteran Johnny LaRowe is expected to use Page Claggett in the lightweight class; Maybard Brooks, 145; Harlow, 155; Caplin, 165; Schmidt, 175, and Cramer, heavyweight.

In the event that Egnell is not eligible to fight, Coach Heine Miller either will use "Turk" Birkland or forfeit the bout. Birkland is awaiting permission from home to box. Johnny Gormley will be used in the light-heavyweight division again as Lancelot Jacques is still rather weak from a recent illness.

Mike Lombardo will occupy his usual 155-pound berth, thereby assuring the Terps of a regular line-up.

Maryland's basketball team, threatened with exclusion from the approaching conference tournament, meets a stout-hearted North Carolina team tomorrow night at College Park. The local quintet must win four of five remaining conference games to qualify.

Oze Simmons Hurt In Auto Smashup

Iowa City, Iowa, Feb. 4 (AP).—Oze Simmons, former University of Iowa Negro football star, was injured seriously today in an automobile accident in which Elmus Strickler, of Iowa City, manager of Oze's professional basketball team, was killed.

Don Simmons, Oze's brother, said Oze suffered several fractured ribs and a deep gash on his head.

Hungarian Ace Ill, Out of Race

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—Kiklos Szabo, Hungarian middle-distance star, today withdrew from the Wanamaker Mile, feature of the Millrose games Saturday, because of illness.

Szabo was slated to match strides with Glenn Cunningham, world record holder; Indiana's Don Lash, Gene Venzke, Archie San Romani, Emporia (Kans.) Teachers, and Charles Fenske, of Wisconsin, in his first start on an indoor track.

The Hugarian runner is suffering from a cold, which interrupted his training schedule. He told Millrose officials he did not believe he could do his best and rather than make a dismal showing in his American debut he chose to withdraw.

He hopes to be in condition to compete in other races on his American schedule, however.

Bowler Rolls 3 Perfect Games in Succession

Upper Darby, Pa., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Bowler Jim Murgie rolled three consecutive perfect games today in a special 6-game match.

Murgie, who was runner-up to Otto Stein, of St. Louis, in the National Bowling Championships at Detroit in 1934, scored 300 in the third, fourth and fifth games. His average for the match was 270.

Tubbs Named to Iowa Post Sought by Bergman

Grid Job Goes To Floridian After Talk

Miami Coach Will Take Place of Ossie Solem Now at Syracuse.

Tubbs and Catholic U.'s Coach Were Last Two Prospects Left.

By the Associated Press.

Iowa City, Iowa, Feb. 4.—Irl Tubbs, genial little Miami (Fla.) University coach, tonight was named head football coach at the University of Iowa.

The board in control of athletics announced its selection of the 49-year-old Floridan after a long session following personal interviews with Tubbs and Arthur (Dutch) Bergman, of Catholic University.

Tubbs, who revived Miami University football fortunes during his two years at the Southern University, will succeed Ossie Solem, who resigned to accept a similar position at Syracuse University.

Boland Named Aid.

The new coach and Bergman were two of the three men selected by the athletic board's sifting committee to appear for personal interviews. The third coach was Matty Bell, of Southern Methodist, who declined the invitation and accepted a new five-year contract proferred by Mustang officials.

Both Tubbs and Bergman lunched with the board this noon, but were not called into the special session which convened at 4 p. m. Tubb's appointment was announced by Chairman C. M. Updegraff at 9 p. m. after receiving the approval of University President Eugene A. Gilmore.

Pat Boland, former University of Minnesota player and line coach at Miami, was selected as Tubbs' first assistant here and will have charge of the Hawkeye linemen.

Is a Coaches' Coach.

Tubbs, a soft-spoken, unassuming fellow, does not include a national reputation in his background, but he has earned a reputation among football men as a sound, resourceful instructor.

A graduate of William Jewell College, he coached high school teams in Missouri for two years before going to Superior, Wis., where he tutored Central High School. Among his players were Ernie Nevers, later an All-America fullback at Leland Stanford University, and John Hancock, All-Big Ten tackle at Iowa in 1924.

Tubbs coached nine years at the Superior Teachers College, but retired because of ill health and moved to Florida. It was there that Miami University authorities lured him out of retirement to take charge of the Hurricanes in 1935.

Miami won five games and lost four in 1935 and continued its improvement by winning six, losing two and tying two last year.

Tubbs has patented several football devices, including an inverted valve for a ball and elastic inserts for football trousers.

Bergman Says Iowa Terms Unsatisfactory

In a telegram to The Post sports department last night Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman stated that the terms offered by the University of Iowa were unsatisfactory and that he had requested that his name be withdrawn from further consideration for the vacant post of head football coach.

Bergman previously had announced that he would confer with Iowa officials with an open mind, that the terms would have to be extremely enticing to lure him away from Catholic University. He pointed out that his contract here still has two years to run and that he has made many invaluable contacts in his seven years at the Brookland school.

Ace Parker Signs Contract With A's

Durham, N. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Clarence (Ace) Parker, Duke University's All-America halfback, has signed a contract with the Philadelphia Athletics and will report at the training camp at Mexico City February 18, Duke officials announced today.

Parker, an outfielder, will report to President-Manager Connie Mack of the A's along with the pitchers and catchers. He played for Greenville, of the Carolina Coastal Plains League, two years.

Parker will join two other Duke men with the Athletics—Chubby Dean, who broke into the A's line-up last year at first base, and Bill Werber, former Boston Red Sox third baseman, recently traded to the A's.

Delancey, Ex-Card, Gets Job as Minor Loop Pilot

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 4 (AP).—Bill Delancey, former catcher for the St. Louis Cardinals, today was appointed manager of the Albuquerque club of the reorganized Arizona-Texas League.

A year ago he came here to recuperate from a serious lung infection; was taken off the train on a stretcher now he weighs 215 pounds.

Unprogrammed Brawls Mark Wrestling Bouts Here

Valiantly Referee Al Bakash attempts to separate Abie Coleman, foreground, and Laverne Baxter at the edge of the ringside last night at Turner's Arena when Baxter, in his wrath at losing the bout, set upon Coleman after the match.

Groggy after being hit by a ringside chair hurled by an irate spectator, Wrestler Jack Hayder reels against the ropes as Referee Bakash wards off further attacks. The fans resented Hayder's rough tactics against Ralph Garibaldi.

Champ, Louis Will Sign Up Monday

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—James J. Braddock, world's heavyweight titleholder, and his Negro challenger, Bomber Joe Louis, will sign articles here next Monday for their 15-round championship battle to be fought in Chicago, June 15.

This was announced today definitely by Joseph F. Triner, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, in the presence of Mike Jacobs, who holds a contract for Louis' services, and Julian Black, comanager of the Detroit Negro. The articles will be signed, Triner said, at a special meeting of the State athletic commission at 3 p. m.

Through the insistence of Black, Jacobs will become associated with the Illinois Sporting Club in the promotion of the contest, assisting Sheldon Clark, millionaire oil executive, who made Braddock an offer of $500,000 to defend his title. Joe Foley, who was associated with Jacobs in the promotion of the Louis-Levinsky fight two years ago, was named matchmaker and director of publicity.

Triner said that Jacobs and Black, who flared up yesterday, declaring that the New York promoter was "stalling" in closing for the fight, had smoothed over their difficulties. They appeared to be entirely friendly at today's meeting.

Wyoming Race Bill Killed.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Feb. 4 (AP).—The Wyoming State Senate killed today a bill which would have legalized pari-mutuel betting and licensed horse racing.

C. U. Five Upsets Geneva, 33-30 Fan Punched, Riot Is Averted

By Lewis F. Atchison.

In a game as rough and tough as old Four-and-a-Half street's reputation, Catholic University's basketball forces last night turned back Geneva College by a score of 33 to 30, at Brookland.

It was the Pennsylvanians' second straight setback on District soil, and they squawked twice as loudly as they did the night before, when George Washington swept to an easy victory over them. A near-riot climaxed the bitterly fought battle, but the lone casualty amounted to one bloody-nosed Catholic University noncombatant.

Trouble arose when Fred Milanovich, Geneva's lanky and hard-playing center, dropped a remark to Fod Cotton, Catholic's coach, about the employment of Umpire Dutch Eberts, an alumnus of the Brookland school.

Referee Squabble.

"I thought there was a rule against using graduates of your own school for referees," Milanovich said to Cotton as they left the floor together.

"That matter was discussed with your coach and director of athletics long before this game was played," Cotton replied, "and neither one objected to the use of Eberts, who happens to be one of the best officials in the South-Atlantic section."

"You were beefing last night and you're still peeved, you sorehead," someone in the milling crowd shouted.

Milanovich turned and uncorked a stiff right-hand punch in the general direction of the voice, and the blow was intercepted by an undergraduate C. U. nose, the personal property of one Gene Hurley. Hurley went down, blood oozing from his nose, and remained on the floor for what amounted to a nine-count. He came up swinging and with death and destruction blazing in both eyes. Milanovich, however, had disappeared into the dressing room, thereby averting serious trouble.

It was a technical foul shot by Capt. Zeke Brown, a penalty against loquacious Tom Hurley, of the visitors—who had some definite ideas about the officiating, that clinched Catholic's victory. Whitey Ambrose had broken a 30-30 tie a few fleeting moments before with a swishy pot shot, but this did not appear to be sufficient with Geneva throwing them goalward from anywhere on the court.

It was a rally in the last five minutes of play that enabled the Cardinals to overtake their guests after the latter had assumed the upper hand early in the final period. Pagano, Ambrose, Brown and Carroll led the attack as Hermie Schmarr, Catholic's high-scoring forward, was held scoreless from the field in this period after scoring a brace of double-deckers in the first.

Schmarr, whose passing and aggressive defensive play was an important factor in his team's victory, and Zeke Brown got Catholic off to a 4-0 lead at the outset of the game, but George Pennebaker led a counter-attack that swept the visitors into the lead. Geneva took a 9-4 and then 12-7 advantage with a clever brand of passing and accurate shooting, but the fighting Cardinals pulled up into a one-point lead as the half ended with them leading, 16-15.

Geneva Leads.

Geneva took command, 19-16 as the second half got underway, but Sam Pagano tied it up again with a field goal and foul, before Brown and Schmarr, with another field goal and foul, respectively, presented the Cards with a 22-19 lead. At this juncture Milanovich dropped a free throw and Hurley sank two field goals, putting Geneva out in front where it remained until near the bitter end.

It was a fitting climax for Ambrose, whose deadly scoring eye kept Catholic in the thick of the fighting. His five field goals were high for the night.

Brawls Liven Arena Mat Battles

By Bill McCormick.

A series of ten, twenty, thirt' mellerdrammers provided the best rassling show of the season at Turner's Arena last night as the boys indulged in an evening of thud-and-blunder entertainment for the benefit of some 1,500 addicts.

Besides the somewhat customary postbout brawl, an argument over a taped elbow, which was being rubbed across an opponent's face and all sorts of gouging and kicking, the program was enlivened by a spectator who wrapped a chair neatly around the head of a pif-fawmer whose rough antics he did not like.

Olsen Wins, the Villain.

Cliff Olsen, claimant of the heavyweight title, defeated Mike Mazurki after 32½ minutes of a cofeature scheduled to a one-fall finish. Clifford, who was very villainous indeed for this performance, forced Mike to resign with a Japanese leg lock which almost broke Mazurki's limb and the hearts of the spectators, who were all for the loser.

In the other cofeature, John Katan flopped Joe Dusek in exactly the same time. This is the one in which the bandaged elbow was featured. The contest reached its climax when Referee Benjamin (Bubble) Bortnick attempted to remove the bandage, with which Joe had been massaging the honest features of Honest Jawn. Bennah couldn't remove the objectionable rag, so Jawn did it himself, then wadded it up and proceeded to rub it vigorously into the Dusek kisser. The bout ended when Joe practically callapsed from the fast and rough action.

Baxter Subdued Twice.

Abie Coleman subdued Laverne Baxter in 14 minutes of a scheduled 30-minute preliminary—and that only started the real action. Baxter went berserk, as the boys around Fourteenth and W streets are wont to say, and it took the combined efforts of seconds, Coleman, Referee Al Backash and the turner private gumshoe squad to subdue him after a long tussle in and out of the ring.

A scheduled 30-minute tussle between Jack Hader and Ralph Garibaldi was declared a stalemate after 14 minutes when an irate ringside customer, who did not like Jack's ungentlemanly tactics, clapped him across the head with a chair. The customer's feminine companion wrested the chair from his hands and the Turner physigian jumped in the ring as blood spurted from a cut over Hader's right eye.

Baby-Face Joey Wack to Get Test Here as Foe of Ingram

Joey Wack, the young lightweight who fights Ray Ingram in an eight-round cofeature at Turner's Arena next Monday night, may not be the best fighter in the ring, but he certainly can lay claim to being the cutest.

In this instance, the word cute is not used in the generally accepted meaning given it in the ring, where the designation "cute" means a fighter is well versed in all the little tricks that befuddle opponents. Wack actually is cute, in the sense that a high school girl uses the word in describing Robert Taylor or Bob Montgomery or the Grand Canyon.

Wack's nose points upward at an angle of about 45 degrees. His features, which are unmarked, are the most childish seen in the ring since the heyday of Jimmy McLarnin. Not only that, he can fight, or he never would have fallen into the hands of Ray Ancel, one of the best trainers in the business.

Wades in Punching.

Like his baby-faced predecessor, McLarnin, Wack has more wallop than the average lightweight, but unlike McLarnin he wades in continually, tossing both hands as he wades.

Ingram, a local lad, has been highly successful everywhere but here. In Richmond, Baltimore and other fight towns he is strictly a main-event boxer, but here he never has got past the six-round class. His out-of-town opponents have been such as Bucky Taylor, Norment Quarles and California Joe Rivers.

JOEY WACK.

Vote of Kennedy of Md. Is One of Two That Salvages Bill.

Bitter Attacks on Racing in Committee Debate Precede Passage.

The House District Committee yesterday reported favorably by a narrow margin of two proxy votes the Norton bill to legalize horse racing in the District. The unexpected strength of the opposition, however, foreshadowed a serious fight against the measure when it the House floor late this month.

Chairman Mary T. Norton was able to save the bill from defeat only by casting an affirmative vote herself and using the proxies of two absentee members Representatives Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, and Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

The measure was then approved by a vote of 10 to 8. The proxy votes would have been discarded had they been challenged when cast. Now, however, the vote stands.

54 Racing Days.

The bill provides for 54 days of horse racing in the District and sets up a taxation system similar to that enforced on the Maryland tracks.

A spirited discussion preceded action on the bill, and several of the new members of the committee denounced it. Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, joined Hull (Progressive) of Wisconsin, in assailing the proposal.

When a roll call vote was taken the members were divided thus:

For: Schulte, of Indiana; Palimsano, of Maryland; Wood, of Missouri; Arnold, of Michigan; Allen, of Delaware; Norton, of New Jersey; Nichols, of Oklahoma, and Kennedy, of Maryland, all Democrats; and Short, of Missouri, and Dirksen, of Illinois, Republicans.

Against: Jenckes, of Indiana; Quinn, of Pennsylvania; McGehee, of Mississippi, Democrats; and Cole, of New York; Bates, of Massachusetts, Shafer, of Michigan; Brewster, of Main, Republican, and Hull.

Feb. 22 Set for Debate.

Chairman Norton stated after the meeting that she will not call up the bill on the next District Day, which is Monday, but will hold it over until February 22.

Bates stated he will file a minority report in the meanwhile.

"We have ha dsome sad experiences in Massachusetts with the rack track situation," Bates, who is mayor of Salem, stated.

"Racing has turned into a racket. Free tickets are sent out by the thousands to children. We have seen the defalcation of public officials."

Under the Norton bill all persons under 21 years of age will be barred from race tracks.

Mrs. Norton estimated that the legalization of race tracks in the District will give the District about $500,000 a year in taxes.

Patriotic Springs Big Upset in Winning Feature at Hialeah

Snark, Heavy Favorite, Second

A. C. Norris Horse Pays $24.60; Par, Widener Entry, Is Victor.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP).—The Wheatley Stable's Snark, one of 1935's best juveniles, today made his first start since the fall of that season and was beaten because of hard luck in the 6-furlond Jupiter purse. A C. Norris' Patriotic, after beating the gate by a wide margin, managed to stagger home a length in front of the Boojum 4-year-old. Mrs. Payne Whiteney's Airy Going, recently a sensational winner, was beaten a neck by Snark for the place. The time was 1:11 1-5.

Snark was taken out of training by "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons in the spring of 1935. The veteran conditioner har been hoping to start Snark in the Wood Memorial and later the Kentucky Derby, but the colt's bad ankles prevented him getting a chance as a 3-year-old. He is a nominee for the $50,000 added Widener challenge cup slated for March 6.

Patriotic, a son of American Flag, known for his occasional brilliant speed, last started in the Inaugural Handicap here on opening day, finishing far in the ruck. As a result he paid $24.60 for $2 in causing today's upset. Snark was favorite at $2.45 to $1.

Jimmy Lynch had Patriotic away like a flash in the bad start. With this big advantage and his natural speed, Patriotic was able to sprint so far in front that his rivals appeared hopelessly out of it. Airy Going kept closest in pursuit, while Snark, away in the middle of the bunch, gradually made up ground. The Wheatley colt stole up with impressive courage on the inside as Patriotic continued in front through the stretch. The latter was out to the limit to win. Snark caught Airy Going in the last few strides.

Miyako, a gray first-time starter, grouped in the "field," brought grief to the talent in winning today's opening dash of 3 furlongs, which attracted 14 maiden 2-year-old fillies to the post. The heavily backed Tea Leaves and Lenpola, the second choice, followed the winner across the wire. Miyako broke well from an outside position. Frankie Kopel had the light-coated miss battling it out with Tea Leaves all the way. Miyako won going away, paying $37.10. Tea Leaves held on to head the forward running Lenpola for second money. The time was :34 2-5.

The easiest victory of the Florida season was scored in the second race, a 6 furlong affair for maiden 3-year-olds. Sceneshifter, which Maxwell Howard recently purchased, along with Fencing, from J. E. Widener, made his first start in the black and white silks and won by 10 lengths, eased up. Trainer Earl Sande had the son of Sickle in fine form. The colt shook off Solar Time early and galloped away from the field. He was a $4.40 favorite and finished in 1:11 flat under 122 pounds. Marfeu came along in the stretch to finish second, a head before Pennine. Both Sceneshifter and Fencing are eligible for the Flamingo stakes.

Sanctity, 5-year-old son of St. Germans, proved to be a real "good thing" in the 7-furlong third contest. Away from the races since the Narragansett fall meeting, the $2,000 plater was backed into $7.20 for $2 favoritism and breezed home by a half-dozen lengths. Behind the winner, four horses were bunched noses apart for the place. The camera showed Black Mischief, Sam Worthy, Roberta and Jildac Rose next in line as named. Sanctity shot to the front shortly after a good start, disposed of Nalita J. and sprinted into an unbeatable lead to win galloping.

J. E. Widener's silks were first home in the fourth, a mile event for 3-year-olds. The scarlet and white stripes, black cap were borne by Par, the second son of Sickle, to win. Sceneshifter, winner of the second race and a Widener costoff, was the other Sickle winner. Par, after breaking loose from Top Radio and Conservative in the early running, opened up a long lead and reached the wire four lengths on top to return $12.10. Isadore, very poorly ridden in his previous race, closed gamely and was just as easily second over Prince Sador. Carlovinlan never could reach the leaders in the role of favorite.

Champ, Louis To Sign Fight Contract

on Chicago's lake front, and the scene of the Dempsey-Tunney fight in 1927, may or may not be the battle ground for Braddock and Louis. Lou Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, invited the promoters to hold the contest in Comiskey Field, in which Louis conquered Levinsky in less than a round.

Jacobs, with Lionel Levy, New York architect, inspected both Soldier Field and Comiskey Park today. Levy has been building fight set-ups for all important championship battles since the days of Tex Rickard. Under his tentative plans, Comiskey Park could be be set up to seat 75,000 spectators with gate receipts of $1,100,000, with seats selling from $3 to $25; Soldier Field could be arranged so 130,000 spectators could see the fight.

"I have been definitely assured that Braddock and his manager, Joe Gould, will be here Monday to attach signatures to the articles," Chairman Triner said. "They saw Jacobs off in New York last night and gave their word that they would come to Chicago. I have called a special meeting of the commission to welcome them, and Louis and his managers."

Triner said that both boxers had promised to be in Chicago not later than May 1 to establish training camps.

TONIGHT'S GAMES.

Western vs. Wilson, at Tech, 7:30 p. m.
Eastern vs. Central, at Tech, 8:30 p. m.

By John R. Vosburgh.

For the benefit of those who missed Central High's upset of Eastern's champions a few weeks ago, the Dark Blue ball tossers will attempt to make their lightning strike twice in the same place tonight when they run afoul of the Northeast gang in Tech's gymnasium. The game will be the finale of interhigh basketball's first night doubleheader in which Western and Wilson renew acquaintances in the opener at 7:30 o'clock.

Getting back to this Eastern-Central incident: Eastern is still very much upset by the score of 24 to 17, that Friday afternoon, January 8. On that ill-fated occasion, the champions saw their record of 23 consecutive interhigh victories broken and haven't rested since.

Central's immediate plunge into fourth place has done nothing to ease the Eastern boys' feelings. The champs are always very particular about the teams they lose to and even the Navy Plebes were not good enough for this distinction. The Kelley crew is insistent on proving that January 8 catastrophe a miscue. It was their sole interhigh defeat of the past three years.

Vermillion a Problem.

The Kelley crew must do considerable proving, however, particularly to Capt. Billy Vermillion of Central. Capt. Billy is very likey to get in Eastern's hair, as he did on the football field, and his status as the leading scorer of the series doesn't enhance the situation for Eastern.

Vermillion has scored an average of 9 points a game and will have the assistance of Charlie Clark, who put the finishing touches on Eastern's defeat with a battery of 12 counters. Nobody on Tech, Western, Roosevelt or Wilson has come close to scoring as many points against the champs as Clark.

One of Central's chief worries will be big Clint Quantrille, Eastern center, who is on something of a scoring streak at present, but Coach Jack Ray is again assigning ox-like Sam Fox, his non-scoring center, to shackle the Light Blue pivot man. In his first meeting with Fox, Quantrille scored a grand total of 1 point.

Goldblatt Counted In.

Coach Ray is also counting heavily on a new scoring find in Hymie Goldblatt, who is highly likely to start. Ralph Matera, Felix Silverstein and Bill Heygster are also in readiness for a starting assignment.

Despite Central's conquest of Eastern, the champs rate the favorites. Coach Mike Kelley has them peppering the hoop like a G-man machine gun crew. They've turned back Wilson, Roosevelt, Episcopal, George Washington High, Tech, Washington-Lee, Navy Plebes and St. John's in quick succession since losing the Central.

Bowlers' Flood Show Stirs D.C. Fans

With local bowling establishments, duckpin associations, commercial concerns and individuals responding generously, the bowling fraternity's contribution to the Red Cross flood campaign is rapidly nearing the $5,000 goal.

The Convention Hall alleys, the scene of the Capital's huge charity duckpin extravaganza on Saturday night, has made plans to accommodate what is expected to be the largest group of fans ever assembled to witness an exhibition of pinshooting by some of the city's foremost experts. Every convenience for the spectator is being provided for with a loud speaker giving a detailed description of the progress of the events.

The whole show, which includes the final block of the Howard Campbell Sweepstakes, top-notch team match between the Regal Neon Sign All-Stars and Occidental Restaurant and a head-to-head singles match between Ida Simmons, national women's champion, of Norfolk, Va., and Lorraine Gulli, chief contender for the No. 1 ranking, all can be witnessed for an admission charge of 50 cents.

Occupying the spotlight with the charity show will be the sixth annual U. S. Women's Sweepstakes. The event consists of 10 games, with the first block scheduled for Silver Spring, Md., and the second block at the Lucky Strike drives.

Of the invading pinwomen from duckpin centers along the Atlantic Seaboard, Virginia is furnishing the largest entry, close to 30. Leading the group from Norfolk is Ida Simmons, the champion.

A preliminary for a free entry to the stakes will be staged tonight at 10 o'clock at the Arcadia alleys, at the conclusion of activity in the Independent Ladies League. Three games, total pins will decide the winner. Fee, including cost of games, is $1.45.

A record entry of close to 200 bowlers will pay tribute to Margaret Lynn, R. F. C. star, in the second annual rolling of the sweepstakes named in her honor on Saturday at the Arcadia alleys. The event, open to both male and female bowlers is of the handicap variety, scratch for men being 106 and 103 for the ladies. The entry fee is $2.

Riding in first place in its first year of competition in the District League, the Rose Liquor aggregation displayed a brilliant brand of pin-shooting to maintain its two-game lead by setting back the challenging Washington Brewery five two games. The Liquormen compiled games of 672, 607 and 608 for a high pinfall of 1,887. Ollie Pacini, of the Brewers, furthered his bid for high individual average with a 413 set.

Occidental Restaurant, in the runner-up position, kept close to the leaders with two wins over Lucky Strike. Convention Hall's odd-game win over Georgetown furnished the feature individual effort of the night, Red Megaw chipping the maples for a 428 set, 11 pins short of Perce Wolf's season record mark. Eddie Espey led the Hallmen with 368.

Heurich Brewers pulled up into third place by blanking Arcadia as the result of near-record pinfall of 1,914. Paul Jarman and Ed Blakeney contributed sets of 422 each.

A season record game of 627 by Nash Post featured in the American Legion League, Courtney boosting the mark with a new high set mark of 408 . . . Both the leading teams, the Benmacks and Daily News were defeated in the National Capital League . . . Beth Minson (Labor) rolled 128 and Margaret Lynn (RFC), a 342 set to share individual honors in the Ladies' Federal League . . . Helen Smith led the C. & P. Telephone League with a top game of 125 . . . Kanns continued to set the pace in the Department Store League by blanking Lansburghs. Guy-Curran broke its ten-game losing streak with a two-game decision over Palais Royal . . . The Washington Post team took undisputed possession of first place in the Daylight League, aided by Clarke's big set of 387.

D. C. Relayers In Millrose Contests

Georgetown, Maryland to Send Mile Teams fro Games Tomorrow.

The one-mile relay teams that will bear the colors of Georgetown and Maryland in the Millrose games tomorrow night at New York, were selected yesterday after final time trials.

Georgetown's quartet, which turned in one of the fast miles in winning its race at the Boston Knights of Columbus games last week, will be composed of Vincent Healy, Leroy Green, George Brogan and Jim McPoland. Because of the Hoyas' fine showing they have drawn one of the best opponents in the East, Rhode Island State, which covered the distance last week in the best time of all teams, 3:30.6.

This will be Maryland's first test of the year, and while Geary Eppley's charges have shown unusual speed in trial runs he doesn't know how well they will fare against a fast field and before a large audience. The Old Line's representatives will be Bill Theis, Johnny Schutz, Ed Miller and Paul Cronin, running in that order. They have a 3:27 workout to their credit, and a similar performance tomorrow should bring them home ahead of the field.

Hagerty Given 2-Yr. Renewal Of Contract

Georgetown Extends the Terms Expiring in '37; Teams Won 15, Lost 18.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A vote of confidence in the form of a two-year contract which will extend his tenure to 1939 was given Jack Hagerty, Georgetown's head coach of football, yesterday by the athletic board.

Smilingly Hagerty, one of the greatest quarterbacks and broken-field runners in the hoary history of the Hilltop, affixed his signature to the document after hearing the Rev. John J. Kechoe, S. J., faculty moderator of athletics, lavishly praise his work.

"The fine spirit he has instilled in the boys, so evident in their work last year, and his excellent qualities of sportsmanship and leadership have been gratifying to Georgetown. We are perfectly satisfied with his record thus far, and feel that the future holds even better things in store for both Jack and Georgetown," Father Kehoe said.

Hagerty Smiles.

Hagerty's grin was a bit broader than usual because the new pact calls for a substantial increase in salary, and while both he and school authorities were unwilling to discuss the financial angle, it is believed to be in the neighborhood of $6,000 per year.

No mention was made of George Murtagh or "Mush" Dubofsky, assistant coaches, but they are certain to continue in their present capacities of end and line coach, respectively. Both were appointed at Hagerty's request and have been of invaluable assistance to him.

The Hoya coach assumed command of Georgetown's gridiron destinies October 31, 1932, the day after Tommy Mills resigned, finishing out that season with one tie and three defeats. The Hilltop reached the dregs of its football cup the following season when the team staggered through an 8-game schedule with only one victory and a tie to show against six defeats.

Clicked Last Fall.

A noticeable improvement was made in the two years immediately following when Georgetown won four of eight games each season, but not until last year when he had seasoned material of his own choosing, did Hagerty really click. A mediocre backfield behind a powerful line rolled through to six triumphs, one tie and two defeats.

Nineteen thirty-six also saw Georgetown conquer Maryland for the first time since the resumption of athletic relations in 1934, by a 7-6 margin. The inexperience of a sophomore halfback was responsible for the lone tie on this record, for it was in the last two minutes of play that New YoYrk University completed a long forward pass for a touchdown and kicked the extra point to gain a 7-to-7 deadlock.

Nats' Rookie Fails to Sign

Fresno, Calif., Feb 4 (AP).—Bill Phebus, right-handed pitcher of the Washington Nats, said today he had rejected his 1937 contract and is asking increased pay.

He said "they gave me a nice boost in pay, but I think I am entitled to more. But I am not a holdout and expect to leave shortly for Florida for spring training."

Cleveland, Feb. 4 (AP).—Willis Hudlin, the Cleveland Indians' pitcher who turned in a single victory last season—and that in the second last contest, is a holdout.

Hudlin is understood to have been paid $7,500 in 1936. Hudlin won 15 games in 1935 but ended last season with the poorest record of any major league pitcher.

Greenkeepers Hear Address On Pests

More than $250,000 has been spent and several hundred thousand more will be expended this year in an effort to control the three golf bugs that are playing havoc with American golf courses, members of the National Association of Greenkeepers were told yesterday at Wardman Park Hotel.

Speaking before some 300 custodians of the greens and fairways, Dr. C. H. Hadley, of the Bureau of Entomology, Department of Agriculture, declared that the Japanese, Asiatic and Oriental beetles have done hundreds of thousands of dollars damage since invading this country.

"Not only do these beetles damage our golf courses, but destroy our plants and crops as well," Hadley said. "The Philadelphia district has been particularly hard hit by these pests, and they are now invading the New England States and going as far west as St. Louis. They also are beginning to appear in the District.

H. F. A. North, of the United States Golf Association greens section, spoke on "Growing Seed of Golf Course Grasses," and following this a number of well known greenkeepers participated in a "turf watering forum."

North said that in Oregon, on a 1,000-acre farm there was enough bent grass to plant 18 holes on 500 golf courses.

"The bent grasses are almost universal for greens on the Northern golf courses," the U. S. G. A. expert said. "For fairways and tees, Kentucky blue grass, redtop, Chewing's fescue and blue grass are used. For the rough, hard fescue and Canada blue grass are employed."

He stated that on the Southern courses greens are usually Bermuda during the summer and seeded to rye grass in the winter, but the fairways in Dixie are generally Bermuda.

"The average spent for seed by golf courses in 1936 was $256 for 18 holes and $67 for nine," he added. "When this is multiplied by 5,000 in the United States it amounts to considerable. This is about one-half of the average spent for fertilizers."

Drought a Blessing.

North went into detail on all the various grasses from the seeding to their harvesting. He showed how we are now producing nearly all of our seed where a few years ago the largest percentage was imported.

In the forum discussion on turf watering, it was brought out that the one thing the drought did for the golfer was make the golf clubs more conscious of fairway watering. At present 22 per cent of the 18-hole courses have installed fairway watering while 8 per cent plan installation shortly, it was pointed out. Seven per cent of the nine-hole courses have fairway watering while 5 per cent plan installation.

The average precipitation for different sections of the country was shown on charts. The charts enable each greenkeeper to tell just how much of a watering system will be required to meet his needs.

A banquet, attended by some 350 greenkeepers, was held last night. The convention and show will end today with the annual election of officers.

Cincinnati has been selected for next year's convention.

C. U. Boxers Ready For Pitt Matches

Apparently fully recovered from last week's defeat by Army, Catholic University's ringmen are fit and ready, mentally and physically, for tomorrow night's match with Pitt at Brookland.

Coach Eddie La Fond is satisfied that the loss to Army will benefit the boys rather than detract from their confidence.

"They were inclined to be just a trifle careless after holding Duke to a draw," he said, "but that shellacking by Army brought them to their senses. I don't think they'll be leading with rights or sticking out chins against Pitt."

Holy Name Bowlers Hold Smoker Monday

The annual smoker of the Holy Name Society Bowling League will be held next Monday at St. Martin's Parish School Hall, 114 T street northeast, it was announced yesterday by the entertainment committee.

As a result of the league's expansion, from 50 teams last year to 64 this season, the biggest affair in the league's history is anticipated by the members, it was pointed out by Committee Chairman Claude L. Nichols.

Reserve Funds Are Unchanged

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that the supply of idle bank funds available for credit expansion remained unchanged at $2,150,000,000 during the week ended February 3.

The board last week ordered a 33 1-3 per cent increase in the amount of reserves which must be held behind deposits. This eventually will "freeze" all but about $500,000,000 of idle bank funds, or "excess reserves."

A $30,000,000 outflow of money into circulation was recorded for the week ended February 3, checking the rise in the credit supply. Money in circulation stood at $6,348,000,000—$606,000,000 over the same week last year. Monetary gold stocks rose $19,000,000 to an $11,364,000,000 peak.

Du Pont Earns $7.56 Per Share Net on Common

Compares With $5.04 Per Share in 1935 and Exceeds 1929.

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 4.—The annual report for 1936 of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., issued today, shows earnings applicable to the common stock of $83,557,740, or $7.56 a share on 11,049,470 average shares outstanding, which topped the 1929 net of $7.09 a share. Earnings for 1935 on the common stock were $55,676,881, or $5.04 a share on 11,050,399 shares. The net income of $89,884,449 for 1936, after provision for Federal taxes on income, and interest on bonds, compares with $62,085,410 for 1935.

Income from operations was $52,965,490, as compared with $40,716,924 in 1935. Income from investments was $48,750,709 which includes $4,746,320 income from marketable securities, investment in controlled companies not wholly owned, and miscellaneous investments, and $44,004,389 from investment in General Motors Corporation common stock.

The volume of business of the company and its wholly owned subsidiary companies amounted to approximately $260,300,000 for 1936, an increase of about 18 per cent over 1935. Total assets are $721,230,126.

Three Billion Francs For Stabilization

Paris, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Bank of France has transferred 3,000,000,000 francs (approximately $148,800,000) of its gold reserve to the French foreign exchange stabilization fund, the bank's statement for the week ended January 29, disclosed today.

The transaction, coming on the heels of the recent British loan of £40,000,000 to the French railroads, will greatly strengthen position of the fund, it was asserted. Decrease of the gold reserve by 3,000,000,000 francs reduces the bank's ratio of gold to engagements at sight to 54.67 per cent from 57.42 per cent.

Market Takes Breathing Spell After Brisk Opening Advance

Steels and Oils Are Favorites With Some New Recovery Highs, but General Average Dips; Bonds Are Steady.

By Frederick Gardner.

Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Feb. 4.—After five consecutive advancing sessions, the stock market today took a breathing spell. Up and down trends throughout the proceedings, although there was selective improvement in the final hour upon reports General Motors strike negotiators might have good news to impart later. There was nothing definite from this sector, however, before the close.

U. S. Steel had a brief moment when it held the attention of the entire Stock Exchange. This bellwether, on an opening block of 5,000 shares, hit par for the first time since May, 1931. The cheering of brokers and clerks had hardly started, though, when "Big Steel" slipped back under pressure of offerings. It ended with a net loss of ¾ of a point at 99.

Favorite steels, oils and specialties, despite obvious weariness of the list, managed to emerge with advances of fractions to around 3 points, a number at new recovery tops.

The nip-and-tuck race was exemplified by the Associated Press average of 60 issues which posted a decline of .1 of a point at 73. Except for a fast start, when the ticker tape lagged a bit, trading was comparatively slow. Transfers totaled 2,388,480 shares, against 2,451,570 yesterday.

Oils in Demand.

Bolstering some of the steels was talk of a near-by price hoist in finished products, due partly to expanding demand, higher labor and other costs. A few petroleum issues made up for lost time as opinions were expressed in some circles another lift in crude rates is likely soon. Hope of larger dividends, based on favorable earnings prospects, spurred assorted stocks.

General Motors seemed to feel better about the labor conflict, although it displayed no particular buoyancy at any time "G. M." was up ¾ at 68⅜. Chrysler edged ½ higher at 128¼.

Conspicuous on the upside was Gulf States Steel, which pushed forward 1¾ to a new high at 77½. Inspiring this issue, apparently, was a scheduled meeting of the company's directors tomorrow to discuss the question of a merger with Republic. The latter was a shade down at 35¼.

Others ahead were Bethlehem, at 84¼, Otis Steel 19, Vanadium 32⅝, Yellow Truck 30¼, Standard Oil of N. J. 72, Union Oil of California 27⅜, Standard Oil of California 49, Socony-Vacuum 19¼, Union Pacific 133½, Atlantic Coast Line 49, J. I. Case 168⅞, Deere 127 and Omnibus 24¾.

Among losers of as much as 2 or so were Westinghouse at 161, General Electric 62½, American Can 107⅜, Western Union 78, Santa Fe 73½, Anaconda 55⅝, Kennecott 60¼, Sears Roebuck 85¾, Montgomery Ward 57⅝, Loew's 76¾, Douglas Aircraft 69⅝, U. S. Rubber 55⅜, Air Reduction 77, American Locomotive 56½, American Telephone 183⅛, and International Harvester 106⅛.

Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was off ¼ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel and corn yielded ¼ to ½. Cotton was unchanged to down 25 cents a bale.

Bond Prices Firm.

Generally higher levels were sought by most sections of the bond market today with railroad and United States Government loans showing the most uniform rallies. Estimates of more than seasonally increased carloadings for the latest week, compared with an actual decline in the preceding period lay at the base of buying interest in the railroad quarter.

Erie 5s added 1½ at 87½; Southern Railway 4s moved up 1¼, to 83½ Mobile & Ohio Montana division 5s gained 3, to 52½, and St. Paul 4s "A" improved 1, at 64. Chesapeake Corporation 5s of 1944 and those of 1947 each advanced 2½ points.

There was a generous sprinkling of setbacks, most of which were confined to a point or less. Rio 4½s, New York Central 6s and Rock Island 4s were among the latter. The Associated Press average for 20 rails moved ahead .2 of a point to 97.8.

Bush Terminal 5s and Terminal Building 5s stood out in the domestic industrial section on announcement warring factions in reorganization proceedings had composed differences and formulated a plan acceptable to each. These issues gained 2 and 1, respectively. Pan-American Petroleum 6s and certificates also shared the spotlight, with gains of 2 points or so. Francisco 6s and Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron 6s and 5s turned the other direction for setbacks of 1¾ to 2 points.

While gains in the utility quarter were not pronounced, the majority worked higher. Utilities Power & Light 5s of 1959 gained 1½, to 64, for the best rise, as other bonds advanced fractionally. The Associated Press averages of ten utilities gained .3 of a point, to 102.2.

United States Governments were 1-32 to 5-32 of a point higher, with turnover roughly $1,380,000, face value, against about $460,000 the day before. Several issues dropped a little.

Foreign obligations moved sluggishly and ended the session about where they were the day before. Volume of all bonds traded totaled $13,154,000, face value, against $14,063,000 Wednesday.

Steel Crosses Par For Six-Year Record

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—After hitting $100 a share in todays' opening stock market dealings for the first time since May 22, 1931, U. S. Steel met sufficient offerings to push it back. The low for the day was 98⅝ and the closing price 99¼. Transactions in U. S. Steel were 31,300 shares

Many other stocks also pinned up new recovery marks in the inaugural whirl, but the majority reduced or canceled their improvement in later transactions.

Bank Clearings Reach Highest In Six Weeks

Total for 21 Leading Cities Is 16.3 Per Cent Over Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—Partly because of heavy first-of-the-month payments, bank clearings in the United States reached the highest level in six weeks. The total for 21 leading cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, for the week ended February 3 was $6,850,935,000, or a rise of 16.3 per cent over the $5,883,448,000 in the similar 1936 period.

This constrasted with an increase of 14.5 per cent in the same comparison a week earlier. Because of flood conditions at Louisville, the figures for that city were not obtainable.

At New York City the turnover was $4,608,978,000, against $4,033,340,000 a year ago, an increase of 14.3 per cent. Outside centers aggregated $2,241,957,000, which exceeded the 1936 total of $1,855,108,000 by 20.9 per cent.

Soviets Rush to Drop Name of Fallen Idol

Moscow, Feb. 4 (AP).—The civil registry did a brisk business today among Muscovites, who do not want to be called Trotzky since the trial of 17 conspirators who confessed their mentor was Leon Trotzky, exiled bolshevist revolutionist.

Newspaper notices showed an even dozen loyal communists visited "Zags"—the registry office—to announce they had changed their names and to petition that their new appellations be made legal.

It was the second name-changing for many of them as most of the Trotzkys dropped their family names in honor of the now fallen idol when he was at the peak of his popularity two decades ago.

Madrid Troops Take Positions Near Capital

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Feb. 4.—Capture of Escalerilla (Little Stairway), strategic position near the edge of Madrid's West Park, by Madrid militiamen, was reported tonight in an official bulletin.

The government reported the capital's defenders, taking the offensive, made two advances west of their city.

In the first, they fought toward the Del Amo student residence in a push in which they withstood their fierce counter-attacks.

In the second, they advanced toward a railroad on the lower part of the West Park, where Escalerilla is situated.

The West Park officially was declared free of Fascist insurgents a week ago.

The official bulletin also reported bitter fighting in progress in Cuesta de la Reina, an important position on the Madrid-Aranjuez road which dominates the town of Aranjuez and the whole valley below.

(Aranjuez is 28 miles southsoutheast of Madrid.)

Third Fight of Week.

It said the engagement was the third this week in Cuesta de la Reina.

On the Guadalajara front, northeast of the capital, the bulletin reported Fascist artillery at La Toba shelled government positions.

The government reported its forces were pushing gradually into insurgent territory of the north, and the Socialist troops were also taking the offensive in the southern sectors of Cordoba and Granada.

The Socialist government at Valencia, meanwhile, took moves to change radically the status of Spanish women. The government promulgated a decree establishing equal rights for women and abolishing "archaic privileges" of husbands, supplementing the Spanish constitution.

Fascists Start Drive.

Gilbraltar, Feb. 4 (AP).—Stalemated around Madrid, the Spanish Fascist command pressed a major drive by land, sea and air tonight to capture the southern coastal city of Malaga.

Lloyd George Again Attacks Gen. Haig in War Memoirs

Final Volume of Series Declares Blunders of Germans Saved Allied Foe From Consequence of Own Mistakes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—The concluding volume of the war memoirs of David Lloyd George, British wartime premier, contains a final drubbing of the late Lord Haig, English military commander. The volume, the sixth in a series, will be published tomorrow.

Lloyd George also defends himself against critics, professional and otherwise, who have differed with him, and particularly chastises those who have remarked on his presumed tendency to condemn harshly those commanders and officials who disagreed with him.

The attack on Lord Haig was occasioned by the publication in England of the field marshal's diaries, the second "batch" of which were released by Duff Cooper while Lloyd George was writing his own story of the war as he fought it.

Appointment of Foch as generalissimo was "hailed with such relief and delight throughout the British army" because "Haig undoubtedly lacked those highest qualities which were essential in a great commander in the greatest war the world has ever seen," Lloyd George writes.

"He was incapable of planning vast campaigns on the scale demanded on so immense a battle area," Lloyd George continues.

"* * * It was far beyond his mental equipment. * * * He did not possess that eye within an eye which is imagination. He was like the blind King of Bohemia at Crecy. * * *

"Selfish he was not, but he was esentially self-centered. There was no other task but his, no other army than the one he commanded; no other use for the youth of Britain than to make up his losses. No victory was thinkable except in battles he planned."

Lloyd George accuses Haig and the other British generals of hiding the abilities of Monash, so that the cabinet would not give him too great opportunity. "Professional soldiers," he writes, "could hardly be expected to advertise the fact that the greatest strategist in the army was a civilian when the war began, and that they were being surpassed by a man who had not received any of their advantages in training and teaching."

The 31 pages given the case against Haig conclude with an accusation that Lord Derby "intrigued" with Haig and Robertson against the cabinet in the matter of attaining a unified command in France.

Lloyd George, countering the charge that his memoirs have condemned practically the entire officership of the entire Allied armies, appends a list of generals he has specifically praised. Pershing's name is omitted from the list. The only two Americans included are Gen. Bliss and Admiral Sims.

The volume ends with the Armistice, and does not consider the treaty. It does include, however, a burning chapter on the slackness of modern day generals, who do not go with their men into battle, but stay safely behind the lines.

"When high admirals," he writes, "are not immune from the jeopardy of war there is no reason why exalted generals should be sacrosanct."

After a considerable review of Allied and German mistakes, Lloyd George concludes: "That victory was within our reach in 1916, or at the latest in 1917, if the strategic direction of the war had shown more imagination, common sense and unity.

"Here is my last reflection on this war. If Germany had been led by Bismarck and Moltke instead of by successors who were inferior in statesmanship and war, the event of the great struggle between democracy and a military autocracy would in all human probability have been different. The blunders of Germany saved us from the consequences of our own."

Sails for England.

Kingston, Jamaica, Feb. 4 (AP).—David Lloyd George, Britain's wartime premier, accompanied by his wife and daughter, sailed for England today at the end of a two-month vacation.

"Europe has gone mad," was his comment on the armaments race on that continent.

Second Big Storm Hits West Coast

Portland, Oreg., Feb. 4 (AP).—The second heavy storm in a week enveloped the Pacific Coast today, "marooned" an Army blimp in mid-air for many hours, and piled new snow on communication lines and highways just cleared of the earlier fall.

Southern Oregon again fought flood conditions as warm rain turned the lowland snow blanket to deep slush and added to the volume of already swollen streams.

Water stood 13 inches deep on one highway.

The Army blimp TC-13, which took off from Sunnyvale, Calif., with nine men on a training flight yesterday, was unable to land until late today because of high winds which buffeted the ship and prevented the ground crew from hanging onto mooring lines.

125,000 Gather In Manila Park For Services

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Philippine Islands (Friday) Feb. 5.—An estimated 125,000 men representing 54 nations gathered before the tall Eucharistic altar in Luneta Park early today to receive communion and acclaim the prophesy of Isaiah that all nations shall gather together to witness the glory of God.

Brilliant lighting was spread through the park to make it a vast open-air cathedral into which marched cardinals and priests, who went among the faithful to administer the sacrament.

Archbishop John J. O'Doherty of Manila was the communion celebrant and the sermon, after mass, was delivered by Archbishop John J. Mitty, of San Francisco.

"Isaiah's prophesy," he said, "'I am come that I may gather them together with all nations and tongues, and they shall come and see my glory,' is fulfilled before our eyes today.

"If today we are thinking of spreading the faith, it is in the broken body of our Lord, it is in the Eucharistic that we shall conquer."

Appealing to Filipinos to stand fast in their faith, the Most Reverend Mr. Mitty declared:

"You, last born of commonwealths on the face of the earth, hold fast that which you have, fight the good fight, keep the faith. Your cities have grown up around churches, and your schools have risen in the shadow of the cross.

"From these, as centers of life, have come your commerce, agriculture, industry and arts. In your national temper of the grace of God has been born your love of freedom, your respect of authority, the esteem you have for your womanhood and those virtues which mark you as the most Catholic nation of the East."

Sheriff to Face Lynching Charge

Abbeville, Ala., Feb. 4 (AP).—Impeachment proceedings against a sheriff and a special grand jury investigation were ordered today as Alabama moved to "bring to justice" members of a mob which Monday night lynched a 19-year-old colored youth accused of attacking a white woman.

On orders from Gov. Bibb Graves, Circuit Judge D. C. Halstead summoned a special grand jury session for Friday. Attorney General A. A. Carmichael said at Montgomery he would file impeachment proceedings against Sheriff Louis Corbett of Henry County "at once."

"I did everything in my power," Sheriff Corbett commented when he learned of the impeachment proceedings order. Carmichael said the order would be based on charges of "neglect of duty." An armed mob of approximately 50 men took the youth from jail here.
